DIABETES

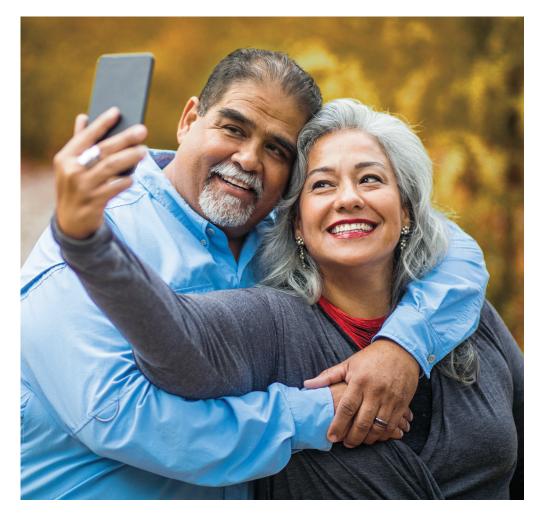

All about the HbA1C test

If you have diabetes, your doctor may ask you to get an A1C blood test. What's that all about? And why do you need it?

An A1C test helps you and your doctor see how well your treatment is working. That knowledge may help you stay healthier.

When you do daily blood sugar checks, you get a glimpse of your blood sugar level at that moment in time. That's important. But with an A1C test, you learn your average blood sugar levels for the past two to three months. It gives you an even bigger picture of your health.

Your doctor can tell you what your A1C goal should be and how often you need to be tested. A goal of less than 7% is recommended for many people.

Keeping your average levels on target can reduce the risk of diabetes complications. If your blood sugar is too high or too low, ask your doctor what steps you can take to correct it.

New members should complete an initial health assessment

Are you a new member? It's important to see your doctor within the first 60 days of enrolling with Santa Clara Family Health Plan (SCFHP). If your doctor is new to you, this will help you get to know each other. SCFHP covers this visit so you don't have to pay anything.

When you see your doctor, he or she will perform a physical exam. Your doctor may also ask you to fill out a survey about your current health and lifestyle, and your family's medical history. This is called an initial health assessment. You may have the option to get a flu shot (depending on the time of year) and other immunizations to protect you if you need them. Your doctor may also recommend other screenings to help prevent or manage any illness.

Has it been over a year since your last doctor's visit?

It's important to visit your doctor every year. Annual checkups give your doctor a chance to see how you are doing with your health. SCFHP covers these visits. Call your doctor today to schedule an appointment.
