 Oncology Department

Top-flight music and entertainment, top-shelf bourbon, high-demand auction packages, delicious food and a capacity crowd combined to make the St. Claire Foundation's 2017 Signature Event one to remember! The event netted more than $17,000 dollars to help enhance the environment and experience for our oncology patients. St. Claire Regional Oncology will begin providing services in our new $28 million Medical Pavilion in early 2018.

Guests enjoyed appetizers and cocktails, highlighted by the Southern Wine & Spirits bourbon tasting bar, and a delicious dinner – including steak and a flaming cherry and nut bread pudding – prepared by Chef Mike Montes and the Aramark catering team.

While The Morehead Jazz Collective set the musical mood, acclaimed raconteur and storyteller Laura Lee Duncan and her son and budding actor Jon Dooley mingled with attendees with their stories and jugs of "moonshine." Local historian and thespian J. D. Reeder received a standing ovation for his portrayal Rev. Elijah Craig, the "Father of Kentucky Bourbon."

Auctioneer James Benton Pendleton of Salt Lick entertained bidders as live and silent auctions combined to generate more than $8,500. Some of the most popular auction items included a privately catered dinner prepared by Chef Mike Montes, a private tour and tasting at New Riff Distilling in Newport, engraved barrel heads donated by Morehead Wood Products, a family membership at Eagle Trace Golf Course, and laser hair removal from SCR Women's Imaging and Aesthetics.

Community Partnerships Key to Reducing Health Inequities Implementation Science in Appalachia

Drive 60 miles northeast of the University of Kentucky (UK) College of Medicine and it's not long before verdant horse farms give way to more hardscrabble terrain. There, where the foothills of the Appalachian Mountains begin to take form, clinics in rural towns such as Frenchburg and Olive Hill are on the front line in addressing lung cancer, opioid abuse, and Kentucky's other entrenched health problems.

In an implementation project based on earlier formative community-engaged research, UK HealthCare principal investigator Roberto Cardarelli, DO, MPH, and colleagues partnered with the St. Claire Regional Medical Center (SCRMC) in Morehead, Kentucky, to train health providers and staff on how to improve practices in tobacco cessation education and early screening for lung cancer.

With support from the Northeast Kentucky Area Health Education Center, the project also educates a spectrum of learners at SCRMC's main campus. Periodic symposia are offered for regional health professionals, and additional education is provided to students in the UK satellite medical school at SCRMC and to residents, nursing students, and future physician assistants.

"Our mission has always been to use implementation science to improve community health," said Kevin Pearce, MD, MPH, professor and chair of family and community medicine and associate dean for rural and community health at UK College of Medicine. "The timing is right for this project because we found that guidelines for cancer screening were not in [providers'] heads or in their practice yet."

Very early data show mixed results—an increase in low-dose computed tomography tests ordered at one clinic is offset by declines in such orders at another clinic. But Cardarelli and colleagues take the long view and remain convinced that as they tweak and expand their work they will see gains.

"It's not community engagement unless you are really engaging the community as a partner. That's a basic tenet of what practice-based research is all about."

-Kevin Pearce, MD, MPH University of Kentucky College of Medicine

Cardarelli gets high praise for his ability to develop a real partnership with a community hospital and clinics. "If you really want to develop these types of projects, you have to develop rapport with the folks who are going to carry them out," said Greg Bausch, PharmD, vice president and COO of the St. Claire Medical Group. "Roberto understands that implicitly. He makes time to come out and work with us, and he's here a couple of times a month. I think that makes all the difference."

One of the distinguishing features of Kentucky's project is that most of the funding for it goes directly into the community, said Pearce. Further, the project team has avoided the pitfall of not listening carefully to its partners. "It's not community engagement unless you are really engaging the community as a partner," Pearce stressed. "That's a basic tenet of what practice-based research is all about."
