KANGAROO CARE

After delivery the baby is placed on the mother's bare chest. The baby snuggles on her chest covered with a warm blanket, just like a kangaroo's pouch. Studies show that holding a baby skin-to-skin following delivery is the best care for your baby.

Welcome AHEC's New Center Director David Gross, MPA

David Gross, MPA

"As it turns out, you can go home again (or, in my case, at least return to a place that once felt like home)," said Gross.

More than 14 years have passed since David earned his undergraduate degree from Morehead State University. "As much as I enjoyed my time here, I've rarely had occasion to visit since walking across the Ellis T. Johnson Arena stage in May 1997," said Gross.

"Obviously, a lot has changed in Morehead and the surrounding area since that time. One thing that hasn't changed – at least not enough – is the poor health status that pervades much of northeastern Kentucky. That is why I am so excited to be the new director of the Northeast AHEC, which – among other things – works to ensure an adequate supply and distribution of health care professionals in the region."

Gross, a native of Breathitt County, and his wife, Jolene, (a quality control nurse at Kentucky River Medical Center) and their three-year-old son, Branston still reside in Breathitt County. After graduating from MSU with a double major in journalism and government, he served as editor of the Appalachian News-Express in Pikeville for five years. For the past nine years, he directed research projects and external communications for the University of Kentucky's Center for Excellence in Rural Health in Hazard.

It was during his latter role that he developed a deep appreciation for the AHEC mission of "bringing our best back home." Having studied rural Kentucky's health disparities, he understands the importance of encouraging more of our local students to pursue careers as physicians, nurses, dentists, social workers, physical therapists and assorted other health professionals.
