Overnight Shelters:

Kansas City Winter Plan beginning December 1, 2023.

The city’s Emergency Operations Center will open a hotline, and buses will transport people to warming shelters or warming buses. When shelters are full, the city will open two overflow, overnight shelters.

Ten shelters will open depending on the weather. Together, these shelters will have capacity for 450 people, which is in addition to the number of people shelters already serve on a daily basis.

- 80 spaces are considered all-gender
- 152 spaces are for men
- 112 spaces are for women
- 6 spaces are for families

The city has four levels to its extreme weather plan, which dictates which shelters open based on the weather:

- Level 1: Between Dec. 1 and March 1, three shelters will be open every night regardless of the temperature. The open shelters will be Hope Faith, True Light and Unity Southeast.

- Level 2: Between Nov. 1 and April 1, four more shelters will open if the temperature is 32 degrees or below, 25 degrees with wind-chill or 32 degrees with wind-chill and precipitation, for a total of seven open shelters. Shelter KC for men, City Union Mission for men and women, and Hope City will open up at this level.

- Level 3: Between Nov. 1 and April 1, three more shelters will open if the temperature is 25 degrees or below, 15 degrees with wind-chill or 25 degrees with wind-chill and precipitation — for a total of 10 shelters open across the city. Heartland, Shelter KC for women and Crosslines will open up at this level.

- Level 4: If the temperature is 0 degrees or below, each shelter will do what they can to increase capacity and take in any person left out in the cold.
