ILLUMINATING THE MODERN WORKSPACE
A URORA is the most head-turning fully refurbished building in Ealing, the hyper-connected West London borough currently undergoing a regeneration-driven renaissance.

The building comprises 52,298.6 sq ft of Grade A, contemporary and design-led office space.

A URORA is named after the Roman goddess of dawn. The reason? A lightwell that runs from the ground floor to the roof, flooding every floor with glorious natural light.

You’ll love the connectivity. You’re 10 minutes from Paddington by train, 18 minutes from Heathrow. And when the Crossrail Elizabeth Line opens in 2019, Bond Street will be reachable in 11 minutes; Canary Wharf in just over 20.

AURORA offers the best in-class in modern office design: in functionality and form – come see the light for yourself!

EALING: RADIATING ENERGY RIGHT NOW

- Ealing is seizing the 21st Century with a thrilling confidence.
- Hundreds of new homes are being built – across several different schemes – to cope with the surge in interest in the area.
- The local economy is locked into an upwards spiral, attracting evermore upmarket retailers, restaurants and businesses to Ealing.
- Heading out in Ealing? Current popular hotspots include the Drayton Court, a combination pub, live venue and boutique hotel that boasts the UK’s largest beer garden, the Questors Theatre, the largest community theatre in Europe; and all-day American kitchen Limeyard, a luxe take on the classic diner concept from Gordon Ramsay’s ex-head chef, Mark Askew.

Ealing is a borough with its sights set firmly on a shining future. The area is currently home to a number of ambitious development projects, with a wealth of expertise, investment and enthusiasm collectively powering them along.

The most ambitious of these projects is Filmworks, situated on bustling Broadway. Scheduled for completion in 2019, this ambitious new ‘cultural quarter’ will comprise a new public square; 75,000 sq ft of retail, bar and dining options; 161 homes; and an eight-screen cinema, retaining the Art Deco façade of the original Empire picture house – a local landmark.

With Ealing’s Crossrail station opening in 2018 – providing sub-10-minute links to the West End – the area’s future looks very bright indeed.

Time to feel the sun on your face.
