The Rickshaw Driver's Smile

For every person who does important work that often goes unseen.

And for the children who will learn to see it.

Ananya did not want to be in Jaipur.

She wanted her tablet.
She wanted her room.
She wanted to be home.

‘This city is too hot,
too dusty, and too loud,’
she said.

*Nani just smiled
into her chai.*

‘Come,’ said Nani,
setting down her chai.

‘I want to show you
something about this city.’

‘What?’ said Ananya,
not moving.

‘The thing you only see
when you look at people
instead of your phone.’
