Section A

Question 1. Why did Edla invite the peddler?

[2 Marks]

Answer: Edla invited the peddler because she was kind and hospitable by nature. Though she initially had doubts about the peddler's true identity, she treated him with respect and warmth. She wanted to make him feel welcome and comfortable, regardless of his social status. The peddler's humble appearance and manner did not deter her from showing kindness. Her invitation was an act of genuine goodwill and compassion, demonstrating her noble character.

Question 2. What, according to Keats, causes a pall over our spirits?

[2 Marks]

Answer: According to John Keats, a pall or a gloomy shadow falls over our spirits due to the despondence, the lack of humanity, and the unhealthy, darkened ways experienced by noble natures. These feelings arise from gloomy days and the harsh realities that challenge our hopes and aspirations. Despite these difficulties, Keats suggests that some form of beauty can lift this pall and bring light and relief to our dark spirits, showing the power of beauty and art to console and inspire us.

Question 3. Why was storytelling especially tiring on Saturdays for Jack?

[2 Marks]

Answer: Storytelling was especially tiring on Saturdays for Jack because he worked hard all week and was already physically and mentally exhausted by Saturday. Jack had to tell multiple stories, including crime stories, ghost stories, and thrillers, to keep the girl entertained through the week. Additionally, his responsibilities, lack of close relationships, and his habit of buying multiple books to last through the week added to his fatigue. Saturdays were particularly challenging because he had to prepare stories for the coming days while dealing with the cumulative tiredness of the week.

Question 4.

How did Derry's handicap affect his life?

[2 Marks]

Answer: Derry's handicap, which caused paralysis in his legs, significantly affected his life. It made him feel isolated and fearful, leading him to live a life of seclusion. His disability limited his ability to move freely, which contributed to his emotional and physical withdrawal from the world around him. Despite these challenges, the presence of Mr. Lamb in his life introduces the possibility of change. Mr. Lamb's brief association may inspire Derry to overcome his limitations and embrace a different outlook, potentially leading to a more engaged and fulfilling life in the future.

Question 5. How does the Governor describe Evans to the Secretary, Examination Board?

[2 Marks]

Answer: The Governor describes Evans to the Secretary of the Examination Board with a sense of uncertainty. Although he is not entirely sure about Evans, the Governor expresses a willingness to try to assist for the Secretary's sake. This suggests that the Governor sees potential or merit in helping Evans despite his reservations. It reflects a cautious but supportive attitude, showing that the Governor is prepared to take a chance for the benefit of the Secretary or the situation at hand.

Question 6.

Why does Adrienne Rich describe the tigers as 'chivalric' in the poem 'Aunt Jennifer's Tigers'?

[2 Marks]

Answer: In the poem 'Aunt Jennifer's Tigers,' Adrienne Rich describes the tigers as 'chivalric' to highlight their heroic, fearless, and bold nature. The word 'chivalric' evokes images of knights and noble warriors who embody courage and strength. By calling the tigers chivalric, Rich contrasts them with Aunt Jennifer's own oppressed and constrained life. While Aunt Jennifer is trapped by societal expectations and marital oppression, the tigers symbolize freedom, power, and a spirited defiance of limitations. The tigers' prancing and confident bearing represent a world of courage and assertiveness that Aunt Jennifer yearns for but cannot express in her reality. This contrast helps underline themes of personal strength versus oppression in the poem.
