Given below are two statements:

Statement-I: Nepal was a Hindu Kingdom in the past and then a constitutional monarchy in the modern period for many years.

Statement-II: The struggling pro-democracy forces achieved their first major victory in 2006 when the king was forced to restore the House of representatives.

- (C) Both Statement-I and Statement-II are false.
- (D) Statement-I is true, but Statement-II is false.

Explanation:

Both Statement-I and Statement-II are true. Statement-I is accurate, as Nepal was indeed a Hindu kingdom and later operated as a constitutional monarchy for many years. Statement-II is also correct, because the pro-democracy forces did achieve a significant victory in 2006 when they successfully compelled the king to restore the House of Representatives, marking a pivotal moment in Nepal's democratic movement.

Question 3. Which of the following events made the South Asian region a sudden focus of global attention after the Cold War period?

[1 Marks]

- (A) Ethnic conflict of Sri Lanka
- (B) Bangladesh War of 1971
- (C) India and Pakistan both became nuclear powers

(D) Kargil conflict between India and Pakistan

Explanation: The correct answer is 'India and Pakistan both became nuclear powers.' This event drew global attention because it occurred just before the Kargil conflict, signaling a new phase in regional dynamics with both nations possessing nuclear capabilities, which increased international concerns about nuclear warfare in South Asia.

Question 4.

Institutional safeguards to minimize the negative effects of globalization on those who are economically weak are known as:

[1 Marks]

(A) Social safety nets

(B) Welfare measures

(C) Voluntary services

(D) Economic liberalization

Explanation: The correct answer is 'Social safety nets' because the context explicitly mentions the need for institutional safeguards or creating 'social safety nets' to minimize the adverse impacts of globalization on economically weak individuals. This aligns with the definition of social safety nets as measures to provide a minimum level of support to vulnerable populations.

Question 5.

In the following question, a statement of Assertion (A) is followed by a statement of Reason (R). Choose the correct option as answer.

Assertion (A) : The entry and the increased role of multinational companies all over the world leads to a reduction in the capacity of governments to take decisions on their own.

Reason (R) : The state continues to discharge its essential functions and consciously withdraws from certain domains from which it wishes to.

[1 Marks]

(A) Both the Assertion (A) and the Reason (R) are correct and the Reason (R) is the correct explanation of the Assertion (A)

(B) The Assertion (A) is correct, but the Reason (R) is incorrect

(C) The Assertion (A) is incorrect, but the Reason (R) is correct.

(D) Both the Assertion (A) and the Reason (R) are correct, but the Reason (R) is not the correct explanation of the Assertion (A)

Explanation:

The correct option is: Both the Assertion (A) and the Reason (R) are correct, but the Reason (R) is not the correct explanation of the Assertion (A). The assertion accurately states that the increasing influence of multinational companies can limit government decision-making capacity, aligning with the context that suggests globalization erodes state capacity. However, the reason presents a different perspective; while states may withdraw from specific domains, they continue to fulfill essential functions, indicating that states still maintain important roles despite external pressures.

Its objectives focus on providing guidance for economic policies and reforms, not directly arranging funds.

Section C

Question 12. Can Shock Therapy be called the best way to make transition from authoritarian socialist system to liberal capitalist system after the disintegration of Soviet Union? Explain.

[2 Marks]

Answer: Shock Therapy was a rapid and often harsh strategy implemented in former Soviet states to transition from authoritarian socialist systems to liberal capitalist economies. The method aimed to dismantle Soviet-era structures entirely, promoting free trade and attracting foreign direct investment. While it did facilitate some transitions, such as an increase in private ownership, it also led to significant economic hardship, including poverty and industrial collapse in many regions. The drastic changes crippled economies instead of fostering prosperity, raising questions about its effectiveness as the best transition strategy. Although some argue that it was necessary for rapid reform, the adverse impacts on welfare suggest that a more gradual approach might have been preferable. Overall, Shock Therapy's outcomes were mixed and often detrimental, indicating it cannot be universally labeled as the best method for transition.

Question 13. Explain any two major causes of globalization.

[2 Marks]

Answer: Two major causes of globalization are technological advancements and the recognition of interconnections between different regions. Technology, especially inventions like the telegraph, telephone, and microchip, has revolutionized communication and facilitated the fast exchange of information and ideas across the globe. Additionally, as people become more aware of global events and their impacts on local situations, the importance of recognizing these interconnections has grown. This awareness fosters collaboration and interaction among nations, driving globalization forward.

Question 14. Explain the two commonly agreed-upon goals of the national movement which were achieved after independence.

[2 Marks]

Answer: After gaining independence, the Indian national movement saw the realization of two significant goals agreed upon by its leaders. First, there was a strong consensus on establishing a democratic government. This democratic framework aimed to ensure representation and participation of the diverse populace in governance. Second, it was vital that the government should work for the benefit of all citizens, especially focusing on uplifting the poor and marginalized groups. This commitment to social justice reflects the movement's core values, aiming to create a more equitable society and address regional diversity and aspirations. These goals highlight the aspiration for a just and inclusive governance system post-independence.

Question 15. Name any four global commons.

[2 Marks]

Answer: Global commons refer to resources that are not owned by any individual or nation but are shared by the global community. Four primary examples of global commons include: first, the Earth's atmosphere, which is crucial for sustaining life and regulating climate; second, Antarctica, a continent dedicated to scientific research and environmental protection; third, the ocean floor which harbors rich biodiversity and mineral resources; and fourth, outer space, which is subject to international treaties governing its exploration and usage. Protecting these commons requires collective global governance and international cooperation.

Question 16.

State the severe economic crisis prior to the fourth general elections of 1967.

[2 Marks]

Answer: Before the fourth general elections in 1967, India faced a grave economic crisis marked by significant challenges. The repercussions of the Bangladesh crisis severely strained the economy, contributing to rising inflation and increasing food shortages. Additionally, a growing population and agricultural setbacks compounded issues of poverty and inequality, leading to widespread discontent among the populace. Moreover, the Congress party, which had dominated Indian politics, faced skepticism regarding its ability to manage these crises, particularly after the untimely deaths of two Prime Ministers, fostering political uncertainty.

Question 17.

Regionalism is not as dangerous as communalism. Justify the statement.

[2 Marks]

Answer: Regionalism and communalism both represent significant socio-political dynamics, yet their impacts differ markedly. Regionalism seeks to address local aspirations, cultural identities, and administrative needs while fostering a sense of belonging and pride. It has played a crucial role in forming linguistic states in India, promoting democracy by allowing regions to voice their concerns. On the other hand, communalism often incites divisions based on religion, leading to conflict and violence. While regionalism may cause tensions, it often encourages unity through constructive dialogue, fostering a democratic environment. Therefore, regionalism is generally less threatening than communalism, which can result in societal fragmentation and instability. The democratic process can accommodate regional needs while ensuring national unity, thus positioning regionalism as a more harmonious force in society.

Section D

Question 18.

Explain any four reasons responsible for economic stagnation in Soviet Union.

[4 Marks]

Answer: The economic stagnation in the Soviet Union can be attributed to several interrelated factors. Firstly, a significant portion of resources was diverted to maintain an extensive nuclear and military arsenal, which placed a heavy burden on the economy. Secondly, the commitment to developing satellite states in Eastern Europe and the Central Asian Republics further strained economic resources. Thirdly, productivity and technological advancements lagged significantly behind the West, creating persistent shortages of consumer goods. Lastly, the lack of accountability within the Communist Party, which had ruled for over 70 years, resulted in an administrative and political stagnation that failed to meet the needs and aspirations of the populace, leading to widespread dissatisfaction and questioning of the system. These elements collectively contributed to the economic stagnation that characterized the late Soviet Union.

Question 19. How is the South Asian Association for Regional Co-operation (SAARC) a major regional initiative by South Asian states to evolve cooperation through multilateral means? Assess.

[4 Marks]

Answer: The South Asian Association for Regional Cooperation (SAARC), established in 1985, is a cornerstone of regional initiative aimed at fostering cooperation among South Asian states. It represents a multinational platform where member countries engage in dialogues to address shared political, economic, and social issues. Despite the recognized need for collaboration, persistent political hostilities have hampered its effectiveness. Key agreements like the South Asian Free Trade Agreement (SAFTA) highlight the potential for economic cooperation, yet regional tensions often overshadow these efforts. The association serves as a critical venue for discussions on peace and security and to nurture friendly relations among countries struggling with mutual distrust. Therefore, while SAARC presents a promising framework for regional cooperation, its success is contingent upon overcoming historical grievances to facilitate multilateral cooperation.

Question 20. "Despite the mixed record of democratic experiences, the people of South Asian countries share the aspiration for democracy." Justify the statement with two suitable arguments.

[4 Marks]

Answer: The aspiration for democracy among South Asian countries, despite varied political experiences, reveals a profound belief in the ideals of governance. First, many citizens across the region, regardless of their country's challenges, show a strong preference for democratic systems. For instance, democratic practices in Sri Lanka and India highlight the public's desire for participatory governance and representation, reflecting a collective aspiration for political rights. Second, democracy in these countries accommodates diverse regional interests and voices, promoting inclusion and addressing marginalization. This adaptability of democracy fosters hope as citizens feel empowered to advocate for their rights, suggesting that democracy remains a viable pathway for South Asia's future.

Question 21. Suggest any four steps for the Indian Government to take to check pollution and save the environment.

[4 Marks]

Answer: To effectively combat pollution and safeguard the environment, the Indian Government can implement several key initiatives. Firstly, stricter regulations on emissions from industries and vehicles should be enforced to ensure adherence to cleaner fuel standards, following the National Auto-fuel Policy. Secondly, promoting renewable energy sources like solar and wind through subsidies can enhance energy conservation, as supported by the Electricity Act of 2003. Thirdly, launching aggressive tree plantation campaigns will help maintain green cover and combat air pollution. Lastly, public awareness campaigns are essential to educate citizens about reducing plastic usage and promoting sustainable practices. All these steps align with India's commitments under global agreements such as the Paris Climate Agreement and aim to create a cleaner, healthier environment for future generations.

Question 22. "One-party dominance did not affect the very essence of Indian democracy." Justify the statement with any two arguments.

[4 Marks]

Answer: The assertion that one-party dominance did not undermine the essence of Indian democracy can be justified through two key arguments. Firstly, the Congress party's dominance occurred within a framework of free and fair elections, which meant that despite its repeated victories, a legitimate democratic process was maintained. Various political parties were able to contest elections, and this ensured voter choice and competition. Secondly, despite the Congress's dominance, India witnessed the growth of a diverse range of opposition parties, which enriched the political landscape. Democratic practices allowed for the representation of regional aspirations, preventing the monopolization of power. Thus, the essence of democracy persisted through pluralism and electoral competition.

Question 23. Describe the role of Jayaprakash Narayan in Indian National Politics.

[4 Marks]

Answer: Jayaprakash Narayan, popularly known as JP, played a pivotal role in Indian national politics, especially during the 1940s and 1970s. Initially a Marxist and active in socialist movements, he became a key figure in the Quit India Movement in 1942. Declining to join Nehru's cabinet, he later embraced Gandhian principles and focused on social reforms, like the Bhoodan movement. In the 1970s, he galvanized a nationwide movement against the incumbent Congress government, demanding total revolution and a return to democracy during the Emergency period. His leadership inspired mass protests, uniting various strata of society. JP's establishment of the Janata Party was crucial in consolidating anti-Congress votes, which fundamentally altered the political landscape of India, leading to the Congress's defeat in the 1977 elections. Jayaprakash Narayan's emphasis on a non-violent struggle and active participation in the democratic process has left a lasting legacy in Indian politics.

Question 24.

Describe any two reasons for the victory of Janata Party in 1977 Lok Sabha elections

[4 Marks]

Answer: The victory of the Janata Party in the 1977 Lok Sabha elections can be attributed to several crucial factors. Firstly, the widespread dissatisfaction with the Emergency imposed by Indira Gandhi from 1975 to 1977 led to massive public support for the Janata Party. Many citizens rallied against the authoritarian measures and sought a change in governance. The Janata Party emerged as a coalition of various opposition parties that successfully united against Congress, allowing them to consolidate votes. Secondly, the Janata Party capitalized on its strong appeal in northern India, particularly capturing seats in key states like Uttar Pradesh and Bihar. This regional dominance helped them win a total of 295 seats and secure a clear majority in the Lok Sabha. Thus, popular discontent with the Congress and effective coalition-building were instrumental in the Janata Party's electoral success.

Section E

Question 25. Explain any two contentious issues between China and India and suggest any two measures to resolve these issues for greater cooperation.

[6 Marks]

Answer: India and China share several contentious issues, with border disputes and China's relationship with Pakistan being prominent. The border dispute primarily arises from disagreements over the Line of Actual Control (LAC) in regions such as Aksai Chin and Arunachal Pradesh, leading to military standoffs. Additionally, China's support for Pakistan, especially in economic and military terms, exacerbates tensions, given India's concerns about security and terrorism. To foster greater cooperation, both nations could pursue confidence-building measures such as establishing direct communication channels between military leaders to prevent misunderstandings during border patrols. Additionally, engaging in economic collaborations that benefit both countries, like joint ventures in infrastructure and energy, could build trust and mitigate competitive tensions. Such steps can pave the way for a more stable and productive relationship.

Question 26. ASEAN took steps to establish an ASEAN community on the basis of its three pillars. Explain the importance of these three pillars.

[6 Marks]

Answer: The establishment of the ASEAN Community is founded on three crucial pillars: the ASEAN Security Community (ASC), the ASEAN Economic Community (AEC), and the ASEAN Socio-Cultural Community (ASCC). Each pillar plays a vital role in ensuring the stability and growth of the region. The ASC is essential for promoting peace and stability among member states by addressing territorial disputes and fostering collaboration in security matters. The AEC aims to create a single market, enhancing economic integration by facilitating trade and investment, which can boost economic growth. Lastly, the ASCC focuses on social progress and cultural development, fostering a sense of shared identity and mutual respect among diverse cultures. Together, these pillars not only advance ASEAN's economic and social objectives but also cultivate a cooperative environment that respects national sovereignty, enhancing regional resilience and unity.

Question 27. Discuss the security challenges faced by the newly independent countries of Asia and Africa after the Second World War.

[6 Marks]

Answer: The newly independent countries of Asia and Africa faced significant security challenges after the Second World War. These challenges were predominantly twofold: external threats from neighboring nations and internal conflicts. After gaining independence, many countries contended with border disputes, often exacerbated by the colonial legacy, leading to tensions with neighboring states. Moreover, internal military conflicts emerged due to ethnic divisions and political instability, resulting in civil wars in several regions. The fear of potential interventions by former colonial powers loomed large, shaping their defense policies. Additionally, the Cold War context forced these nations to navigate their alignment between superpowers, leading to further insecurities. New issues such as terrorism, nuclear proliferation, and ethnic struggles complicated matters, compelling these nations to strategize extensively to ensure their sovereignty and safety. As such, the interplay of external threats, internal dissent, and global geopolitical dynamics characterized the security landscape of post-colonial Asia and Africa.

Question 28. Explain the differences between traditional and non-traditional notions of security.

[6 Marks]

Answer: Traditional notions of security focus primarily on military threats and the preservation of state sovereignty. They emphasize the use of military force to counter external threats and maintain internal order. This perspective views security through a narrow lens, concerned mainly with the state's capabilities and territorial integrity. In contrast, non-traditional notions of security expand the definition to include a wider array of issues affecting human existence, such as poverty, environmental degradation, and health crises. It advocates for a broader understanding that includes individuals and communities, reflecting a shift toward 'human security' and 'global security'. Non-traditional security recognizes that threats can emerge not only from external adversaries but also from systemic vulnerabilities within society. This shift highlights the interdependence of global populations and the need for cooperative approaches to ensure safety and well-being for all, not just the state.

Question 29. Support the statement: 'The foreign policy of independent India has pursued the dream of a peaceful world.'

[6 Marks]

Answer: The foreign policy of independent India has consistently aimed at fostering peace and stability on the global stage. Emerging after the turmoil of World War II, India became a strong advocate for sovereignty and non-alignment, refusing to join the Cold War camps. This allowed India to champion peace, as seen in its leadership during the Suez Canal crisis in 1956 where India protested against colonial aggression. Furthermore, India actively contributed to United Nations peacekeeping operations, emphasizing its commitment to global peace. India's push for a non-discriminatory non-proliferation regime and its advocacy for a New International Economic Order (NIEO) showcase its desire for equitable and just global relations. Overall, India's foreign policy reflects its historical struggle for independence and its vision for a peaceful world, striving to resolve international conflicts through dialogue rather than confrontation.

Question 30. Describe three major developments that took place in Indian politics in the last decade of the 20th century.

[6 Marks]

Answer:

Three significant developments in Indian politics during the last decade of the 20th century include the rise of coalition governments, the decline of the Congress party's dominance, and the increasing influence of regional parties.

1. Rise of Coalition Politics: The 1990s marked a shift from single-party dominance, particularly by the Indian National Congress, to a more fragmented political landscape. This led to the formation of numerous coalition governments at the national level, requiring parties to forge alliances and compromises to govern.
2. Decline of Congress Dominance: The Indian National Congress, which had held a dominant position in Indian politics since independence, experienced a significant decline in its electoral fortunes. This was due to various factors, including internal party issues, corruption scandals, and the rise of regional and caste-based political formations.
3. Increased Influence of Regional Parties: The 1990s witnessed a surge in the influence of regional parties, which gained prominence in their respective states and began playing a crucial role in national politics. These parties, often representing specific linguistic, caste, or regional interests, became kingmakers in the formation and survival of coalition governments.

Question 31. Describe three recommendations of the Mandal Commission to solve the problems of the Other Backward Classes.

[6 Marks]

Answer:

1. Reservation in Education: The Mandal Commission recommended that 27% of seats in higher education institutions be reserved for OBCs. This recommendation was aimed at addressing the lack of access to education for the OBCs, who had been historically disadvantaged and marginalized in terms of education opportunities. The reservation policy provided the OBCs with greater access to higher education and opportunities to improve their social and economic status. The policy also helped to create a more diverse and representative student population, which was a key objective of the commission.
2. Reservation in Employment: The commission recommended that 27% of government jobs be reserved for OBCs. This recommendation was aimed at addressing the under-representation of OBCs in government jobs, which had been dominated by higher castes. The reservation policy helped to create greater job opportunities for the OBCs, who had been traditionally excluded from these positions due to their lower social status. The policy also helped to increase the representation of OBCs in the bureaucracy and other government institutions, which was a key objective of the commission.<sup>3</sup> Social Justice: The Mandal Commission also recommended various measures to promote social justice for the OBCs, such as the provision of scholarships, stipends, and other forms of financial support for OBC students. The commission recognized that the OBCs faced discrimination and social exclusion, and these measures were aimed at addressing these issues. The commission also recommended that the government take steps to improve the economic conditions of the OBCs,

Question 32.

"India played an important role in maintaining Afro-Asian Unity." Support the statement with three suitable examples.

[6 Marks]

Answer:

India played a significant role in fostering Afro-Asian unity through its foreign policy and active participation in international forums. Three key examples include hosting the Asian Relations Conference in 1947, staunchly opposing colonialism and racial discrimination, and playing a crucial role in the Bandung Conference of 1955.

- 1. The Asian Relations Conference (1947): Just before India's independence, Jawaharlal Nehru spearheaded the Asian Relations Conference in New Delhi. This event brought together representatives from various Asian countries, demonstrating a commitment to solidarity and cooperation among nations emerging from colonial rule. It laid the foundation for future collaborations and highlighted India's proactive role in promoting Asian unity.
- 2. Opposition to Colonialism and Racial Discrimination: India actively championed the cause of decolonization and condemned all forms of racism, including apartheid in South Africa. This stance resonated with many newly independent African and Asian nations, strengthening the bond of shared experience and common goals.
- 3. The Bandung Conference (1955): The Bandung Conference, officially known as the Asian-African Conference, was a major milestone in Afro-Asian solidarity. Convened in Indonesia, it brought together representatives from 29 countries in Asia and Africa to discuss peace, economic cooperation, and cultural exchange. India, under Nehru's leadership, played a vital role in shaping the conference's agenda and promoting its objectives. The conference resulted in the Bandung Declaration, which emphasized principles of peaceful coexistence, non-interference, and mutual respect among nations.
