

SHEY'S UNIVERSE

Commander Pepper and
the First Space Suit

by AUTHOR NAME

Somewhere far above the clouds, past the moon and past the stars, lived a little dog named Pepper — the bravest pup in the whole galaxy.

One quiet night, a soft beeping woke Pepper up. A signal! A message, blinking in from somewhere very far away.

“This is a job for Commander Pepper,” said
Pepper, hopping out of bed.

Pepper zipped up the very first space suit ever made — soft, sparkly, and covered in tiny stars.
Paws in the gloves. Bandana tied tight. Ready for anything!

3... 2... 1... Blast off! Pepper's rocket zoomed past Saturn's rings, dodged a friendly comet,
and waved hello to a smiling little planet.

Pepper wasn't scared. Not even a little.
Because the bravest astronauts know: being small just means you have more room for big dreams.

SHEY'S UNIVERSE

When the call to adventure comes from beyond the stars, one brave little astronaut answers — paws first, heart bigger than the galaxy.
