Research interests

- My research focuses on governance, decentralization, and citizen participation in Bangladesh and South Asia, with particular emphasis on how local government, NGOs, and civil society partnerships can promote poverty reduction, social justice, and sustainable development. It also focuses on public administration in the age of digitalization and smart public service delivery, including e-governance and digital public service platforms such as Union Digital Centers, and their potential for inclusive, gender-sensitive, and youth-centered empowerment. I am additionally interested in higher education governance, voluntary education and culture, and the ways in which values and virtues are cultivated through formal and non-formal learning. Comparative, interdisciplinary, and policy-oriented approaches guide my work, linking theory with practice, SDG implementation, and community-based interventions.

4. Linguistic skills

- Bengali, mother tongue.
- English, fluent in all sections (writing, reading, speaking and listening).
