

FIS has since many decades published guidelines to assist in the promotion of skiing and snowboarding, such as the rules for the conduct of skiers and snowboarders see here

These are to be used for guidance only and are subject to and do not replace the specific rules applicable to any given ski area, course, park or competition. The following document is the latest version of the FIS Code of Conduct for Snow Parks.

FIS Code of Conduct for Snow Parks

1. Know your own skills and abilities

Skill progression starts with the basics and moves to skills that are more complex.

2. Train with others and work together

Training together allows for feedback and faster progression.

3. Look at the terrain before you start

Inspect everything before you start and have an understanding of the conditions of the features and the snow.

4. Use Safety Equipment Properly

Ensure that you are using safety equipment according to the regulations and standards.

5. Have a Plan

Prepare yourself and set your goals, so that you can move through the progression of a skill. Skills need to be stabilised before you move on to the next step.

6. Understand the progression of the skill and of the features

Studying skill progression can be done before you start to practice it.

7. Observe and follow the local rules

Observe all of the rules and safety practices within the snowpark.

8. Respect the terrain and others

Respect the others that are in the same environment.

9. Assistance

At accidents, every skier or snowboarder is duty bound to assist.

10. Identification

Every skier or snowboarder and witness, whether a responsible party or not, must exchange names and addresses following an accident.
