

Unique chocolate treats for Valentine's Day

Keep things interesting.

Move over, Russell Stover. For choosy chocolate lovers, common candies just won't do. If your girlfriend, boyfriend, best friend, mom or whoever you want to treat (yourself included) craves unique chocolate, these unusual candies are the perfect Valentine's Day gift. They may not come in heart-shaped boxes, but it's what inside that counts.

From camel milk and crickets to curry powder and coconut ash (and plenty of less alliterative options), these interesting chocolates are all worthy of adoration. And yes, sweet-salty bacon chocolate bars deserve a mention, but even that's old hat by now. Try one (or more) of these unique chocolate gifts for your discerning Valentine.

K+M Extra-Virgin dark and milk chocolate sampler gift box

David Escalante

This Thomas Keller-backed -- and Oprah-approved -- organic extra-virgin olive oil chocolate has an ultra-smooth mouthfeel and extra antioxidants from the heart-healthy fat (which comes from famous Italian olive oil producer Armando Manni). This sleekly packaged set of milk and dark chocolate is also available on the official Keller + Manni Chocolate site.

$59 AT GOLDBELLY

<https://www.cnet.com/news/unique-chocolate-treats-for-valentines-day/>