Settle on stripes

Ceiling striping can add a bit of unexpected fun to your space. “We custom-printed black and white stripes to match the width of the exterior canvas draperies and awnings,” says Eddie Maestri, principal architect, creative director, and founder of Maestri Studio, noting that there is a lot of glass in the house, so this is a striking element that can be seen inside and outside throughout it. “I wanted to make the otherwise dull long hallway a focal point that lures your eye down the hall with the stripes, as well as tie in the cabana theme displayed throughout the house,” he adds.

Find a focal point

We love how this “perfectly symmetrical” foyer ceiling designed by Maestri is trimmed with layered molding to build a focal point around the entrance. “In this case, we used a Candace Olsen wallpaper from Kravet on the ceiling to bring the leafy outdoors inside, create visual interest on this charming ceiling, and accentuate the traditional detailing and interiors,” he shares. The subdued color palette also draws in your attention without being overwhelming.
