Trend:
Velvet

"I saw a ton of velvet at High Point, from carved case goods and chairs to rugs," says Maestri, who adds that the dimensional fabric appeals to "both sight and touch."

Trend:
Alabaster lighting

The white mineral glows beautifully when backlit. Says Maestri: "It's riding off of the popular solid surface veining moment."

"Manhasset" alabaster sconce (from $756/Hudson Valley Lighting)

Trend:
Draped fabric & furniture

Maestri is "loving" this throwback look, from skirted tables and cord covers to gathered fabric sconces—and even case goods that have the look of draped fabric.

Bunny Williams Home skirted drinks table (to the trade/Kravet/Lee Jofa)

Julian Chichester "ruffle" coffee table ($10,750/Laura Lee Clark)

Trend:
Satellite coffee stations

"Coffee stations are making their way outside the kitchen," says Rice, who has placed brew hubs in primary baths and bedrooms.

Breville Barista Express ($750/Williams Sonoma)

Christina Schou Christensen ceramic (price upon request/artsy.net)

Trend:
Appreciation of ceramic craft

"What I am seeing is a new appreciation in the blatant imperfection and obvious handcraft ceramics can convey," says Rice.

Trend:
Circa-1980s-'90s minimalist yet avant garde post-modernist design

"This is something I'm very excited about because I think this is a genre of incredible design that has been frequently overlooked," says Rice. "Designs from Japanese talents Rei Kawakubo and Shigeru Uchida are some of my personal favorites. The elusive double-seat 'September' chair by Uchida is my personal 'white whale' as an avid design collector."

"Sedia No. 75" chair by Paolo Pallucco ($29,421/1stdibs)

Retro redo!
Rice loves this modern re-release of a favorite mid-century design

Trend:
Audiophilia

"Turntables and vinyl aren't necessarily a new trend, but based on client requests, they are still going to be going strong well into 2023," says Rice. "There are some great new design-heavy options for audiophiles."
