12 Interior Design Trends That Will Be Huge in 2023, According to Designers

White walls are out, and honey onyx is back in!

While we tend to eschew design trends in favor of more timeless and personal furnishings, it's still fun to hear what designers think will be trending in 2023 and beyond. Over the last few years, most of us have spent more time at home and it's changed the way we view our spaces, both aesthetically and functionally. For example, white kitchens and neutral spaces had their moment, but designers are predicting that people want to have fun with their interiors and create a more personalized space now that they're spending more time at home (after all, who wants to look at blank walls and beige furniture when they could have interesting wallpaper and a colorful couch?). From bold paint to textured walls to layered textiles, now is the time to create a space that makes you smile. Here, the biggest interior design trends for 2023, according to designers.

Architectural-Inspired Interiors

Architecture will continue making its way to interiors in 2023. Eddie Maestri, principal architect, creative director and owner at Maestri Studio, says, "Along with the art deco-inspired spaces we've been seeing, we'll start to see nods to other distinctive styles that are graphic and bold like Brutalism and Bauhaus."
