

- Plain Slicing (or Flat Slicing) - This is the slicing method most often used to produce veneers for architectural woodwork. Slicing is done parallel to a line through the center of the log. A combination of cathedral and straight grain patterns results, with a natural progression of pattern from leaf to leaf.

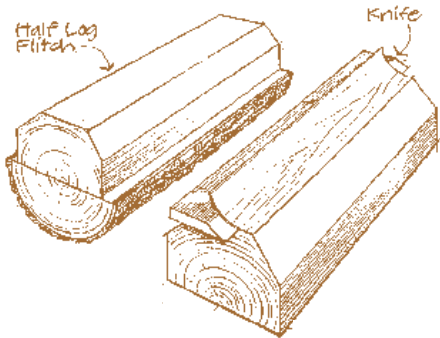

Figure: 4-014

Reprinted with permission of the North American
Architectural Woodwork Standards
Sponsor Associations: AWMAC and Woodwork Institute