This ranking of the top, accredited, nonprofit, online colleges and universities is based on extensive research and familiarity with American online education. In formulating this ranking, factors examined include academic excellence, scholarly strength of faculty, online teaching methods, tuition costs, reputation, awards, regional accreditation, financial aid, and range of degree programs offered.

“With this extensive list of one hundred schools, prospective students looking for an alternative to the traditional on-campus experience can find an outstanding accredited college or university with an online degree program to fit their schedule and budget,” says Dan Edelen, marketing director for TheBestSchools.org. “To simplify the search for students, the web page includes filters for costs, states, and regions, helping students to pinpoint the information most pertinent to their needs. In addition, the page lists additional links to both honorable mention schools and to the top online colleges in each state.”

TheBestSchools.org is delighted to spotlight the outstanding achievements of administrators, faculty, and staff who have dedicated themselves to making their colleges and universities the pinnacle of online education in America.

TheBestSchools.org is a leader in school rankings — K–12, college, postgraduate, online, and on-campus — providing millions of prospective students with the information they need to find the right school for them. TheBestSchools.org is an
