“Military Education Headquarters’ musters our leading resources into a nexus for military personnel and their families to get the career and education-related information they need,” says Dan Edelen, marketing director of TheBestSchools.org. “Helping those who have served our nation find ways to build off their military experience through higher education is one way we can give back and honor their service.”

Resources provide detailed information on GI Bill benefits for education, best online colleges for military personnel, information on military academies, transitioning to college, starting a civilian career, and much more. Marine veteran and Senior Special Agent for the U.S. Secret Service Paul A. Buta consulted with the staff of TheBestSchools.org on material offered, noting the importance of using the GI Bill and how to translate one’s military knowledge to meet career KSAs. Service men and women can rest assured they will receive guidance from the highest quality information. Best of all, TheBestSchools.org will continue to expand, update, and enhance the offerings in the web-based series.

TheBestSchools.org is a leader in school rankings — secondary, college & university, postgraduate, online, and on-campus — providing millions of prospective students with the information they need to find the right school for
