About Chandler

Chandler is a city located in the administrative region of Gaspésie-Îles-de-la-Madeleine, in Quebec. The city is the capital of the Rocher-Percé. It is the second largest city in Gaspésie with a population of 7,535 inhabitants.

The borough of the city of Chandler, which has become a city center since the municipal merger in 2001, is the most populated area of the city and has hosted many businesses and large stores. Since the closure of the Gaspésia factory in 1999, the city has undergone a major transformation to become a commercial city and contribute to the revival of the region's economy. Several new businesses have been established there, including a Super C supermarket, a La Source electronics store and a Dollarama in the shopping center, a Familiprix pharmacy, a hotel (Motel Chandler) and a Mitsubishi car dealership. The city also has several restaurants, including major fast food chains that have popped up downtown such as McDonald's, Subway, Tim Hortons, Dixie Lee and A&W. Several new commercial buildings have been erected along René-Lévesque Boulevard (IGA, Banque Nationale, Jean Coutu, Caisse Populaire Desjardins). Chandler Hospital, currently the city's largest employer, is also undergoing a complete transformation of its interior fittings, as well as its exterior facade.
