practically sustainable!

Delivery meals are a strong growth market. It is estimated that by 2030, most meals will be ordered rather than cooked. The Corona pandemic has fueled the trend with ingenuity out of necessity. Whether it's on the go or for home, meals also want to be packaged in a visually appealing and sustainable way. Because since July 2021, according to EU regulations, plates, cutlery, straws, packaging made of Styrofoam and other plastic products that litter our oceans are no longer allowed and the rest is no longer state-of-the-art, if only for image reasons. Disposable tableware and packaging that is compostable or at least biodegradable offer a good alternative, but are not yet the end of the line. From 2023 onwards, reusable packaging, which for example can be borrowed by the guest by deposit or brought by the guest himself, will also be legally required, according to the decision by the German parliament.

LUSINI offers you a wide range of alternatives, from sustainable disposable tableware to reusable packaging. Depending on the requirements of the dishes, there are different materials that ensure that the food does not lose its flavor. We present the most important ones to you here. We will also be happy to help you put together the right disposable and reusable tableware for you. Just ask us, we will be happy to advise you.

Bagasse made of sugar cane

A fibrous mass that is left over in large quantities as a "waste product" during sugar extraction. A material that proves particularly valuable in the manufacture of to-go products. It is resistant to heat and cold, from -25°C to +220°C, impermeable to water and grease, very stable and versatile, biodegradable and compostable. Paper, carton and cardboard

The material can be wonderfully branded and is versatile, from cups to plates – mostly coated with environmentally friendly PLA – to appealing cardboard boxes and bags that can be designed very stylishly, everything is possible.

PLA/CPLA

The natural raw material polylactide acid, also known as polylactic acid, is obtained via a fermentation process of starch-containing plants. In the case of CPLA, talc powder is also added. This makes it transparent, harder and heat-resistant up to +85°C. The organic plastic is very similar to normal plastic, but is biodegradable and compostable. Because it is permeable to water vapor, food retains its aroma.

Reusable

Boxes such as glass, stainless steel, polypropylene are ideal for use as reusable containers. They are suitable for both dishwasher and microwave. Refinement with a desired logo is possible. And the environment is protected, because no unnecessary waste is produced. On the contrary, the materials are recyclable.

The idea of conserving resources and paying attention to sustainability is becoming increasingly important. The natural environment is moving more and more into the interior. There, wood and earthy tones convey a calm mood and a special feeling.
