Welcome to Park

At the end of the 19th century, when Rovinj was still a sleepy fishing town, one young nobleman had a vision of an exclusive health and tourist resort. When he arrived to Rovinj from Vienna, he stepped out of his carriage, looked across the bay at the cape covered in thick forest and said to his young wife: “Look! It’s over there!”

We find that the Grand Park Hotel Rovinj has the most beautiful views on the Adriatic, but we would like you to be the judge of that. No matter where you stand in the hotel, you get the impression that you are staying in a park overlooking Rovinj, St Euphemia Church, the St Katarina Island and the most beautiful sunset. Impressive and elegant, the hotel was created by 3LHD Studio Zagreb and Lissoni Architettura Milan, and it’s more than the young nobleman could ever have even imagined. Deeply rooted in Istrian history and nature, from the cuisine based on authentic local produce to the details inspired by yesterday and reimagined for today.

Grand Park Hotel is host to many artists, chosen by Lissoni Architettura, whose works are displayed around the premises. There are numerous spaces that will capture your imagination and give you a reason to slow down and reflect. And, if you keep your eyes and heart open, the hidden stories are bound to emerge.

WELCOME

A Walk in the Park

Let us take you for a quick walk through the hotel. We want you to easily navigate through it, for it is now your home away from home.

ABOUT THE HOTEL

With its cascading structure covered in greenery, the hotel is almost a visual continuation of the forest park behind it. The floors offset to follow the slope of the site and form large terraces, Mediterranean gardens, pools and sun decks. Once you enter Park, its corridors become the park's pathways, as the hotel's levels are named after and dedicated to specific plant species from the park.

Apart from being an architectural piece of art in itself, the hotel houses and proudly presents a number of contemporary art pieces placed throughout the premises, always inviting you to stop and refocus.

You can enter Park either from the top (5th) floor, or from the Lungomare on the level 0. From there, the beaches are a short walk away on one side, while, on the other, the path leads you to the town centre, just 5 minutes walking distance from the Park hotel. Bear in mind that the entrance on level 0 is closed after midnight due to safety reasons and you can enter only by using your room key.

Art in Park

Our walls don't just support the hotel structure, they support art as well. Aside from their primary function, various spaces of the hotel serve as a stage for art. Different artists were inspired by this lively charming town and have given us their vision of Rovinj. Open your eyes and ears and feel free to slow down if their art challenges you. Let their vision be your inspiration for exploring this town or for looking in the depths of your own soul.

ROVINJ'S SHADOW

Rovinj is a town which should be seen from the sea, and my first glimpse of it was indeed from the water. I perceived a sea that was transparent and at the same time dense, imagining multifariously coloured reflections. Reflections which helped me understand the mellow quality of the town's colours, the movement of the sea rendering my photography ever more fluid. My photos are pure and simple narratives that occasionally verge on the extreme, because, if photography is by definition recording with light, my photos record worlds of unexpected horizons with light.

ROBERTA
PATALANI
UNDER PRESSURE

Technique

The name of the work derives from the technique with which it was made, called sand casting, in which simple sea sand is held in a frame in which the IMPRESS creates objects, the ones that we borrowed from nature and our surroundings. This becomes the negative mold in which the concrete is cast. The low relief that comes out of it maintains the natural softness of the sand forms and the robust rawness of the cement.

Description

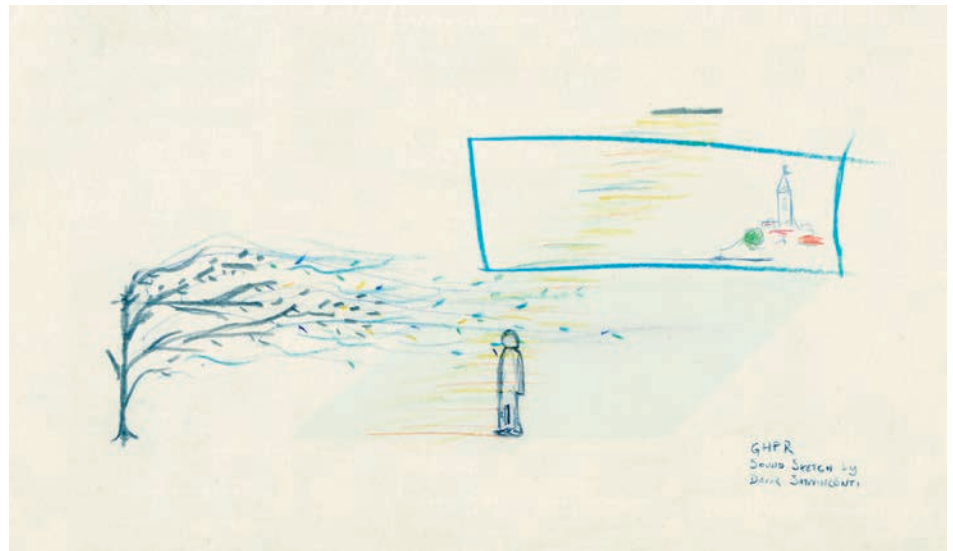

The eight decorative panels tell the beauty of Rovinj by stylised shapes and symbols seen during my trip there.

The first panel starts with the arrival: the vibrant light of the sea between the trees gives way to the ancient map of the town with its small streets, illuminated by the light of the sun pushing soft shades. The bell tower of St. Euphemia is the centre of the work around which all of the elements revolve, appear and fade back into the sand.

PREDRAG

ROVINJ
DIARIES

For me, Rovinj has always been an experience of the forces of nature tamed with an indescribable mildness and gentleness. I see the present architectural solution for the new Grand Park Hotel Rovinj as an effort to elevate and highlight the beauty and strength of this natural world. Thematically, my painting reliefs from the cycle entitled “Impressed” deal with sensations and experiences that leave a mark on our subconscious minds. Artistically, their final appearance also suggests the elemental strength of the forces of nature and the traces of their footprints over millions of years. The paintings achieve a harmonious accord with the space of this contemporary architecture and assist in creating a calm and harmonious atmosphere for guests and visitors. In artistic and technical terms, the painting reliefs are, not only artistically, but also conceptually defined by the process of their execution. As part of that process, various segments of reality are captured – framed by a reinforcing mesh. Gypsum lime plaster is then poured onto a particular segment to which, as the last layer, canvas is mounted. Finally, all of these layers are stretched onto a frame. This process is a complete inversion of the standard approach to constructing a painting. Here, the painting has actually happened before we have even had a chance to fix it in our minds.

SOUND
DIARIES

I imagined and executed the soundscape of Grand Park Hotel Rovinj relying on its interior and exterior spaces. The sounds appear and waken from afar, through colour, texture and volume changes, it repeatedly and tirelessly appears and disappears. The sound shapes the air and inhabits the space itself, it invokes the state of total awakening in us, and enhances the silence of the space. The sound is made of elements that complement each other. Long reverb sounds of a grand piano, electric guitar, kalimba or paraphonic analogue synthesiser interweave with the field recordings from Rovinj's area. The sea's ripple effect mixes with its wave field lines, mild winds in bamboo leaves with local people's conversations. These meeting points form sound junctions, places where audio paths cross. Aside from the comprehensive soundscape in the lobby and the Wellness and Spa area, there are also hidden micro sound locations that call the guest to gradually discover the space, simultaneously forming his own inner landscape.

DIARIES

Rovinj in the winter is a totally different story than Rovinj in the summer. While strolling up and down the Old town of Rovinj, my attention was caught by local people and animals in their typically slow Croatian tempo which usually speeds up (a little) during summer months filled with tourists. For someone like me, who lives in the city, this experience of Rovinj was a sight for sore eyes, music to my ears and rhapsody of taste for my mouth.

I spent two days in Rovinj for the first time in my life. And, I was lucky enough to catch its magic during two very different days. The day I arrived, it was raining and the streets were empty. It was foggy and humid, but still very lovely. It was mysterious and gentle at the same time, due to the town's colour palette. I walked everywhere, observing the architecture, windows, materials, small details. I enjoyed smells of the sea, forest and “grandma’s cooking”. I wrote down all my impressions. The next day, sunshine woke me up. I went out and walked to the main square. It was like being in a different city. Streets and terraces were crowded with people, I heard seagulls, people talking in Italian, English, Croatian... Everything was alive and full of life. Colours were brighter, and everything seemed faster. I sat in one of the café bars with my sketchbook. I eavesdropped and wrote dialogues, I sketched a few people or wrote the description of the situations. When I came back to Zagreb, I gathered all of those sentences and sketches and made drawings. It was so easy, almost natural. I used ink, pencils, coloured pencils, watercolor. I imagined people enjoying Rovinj and then going back to their rooms in the Grand Park Hotel. I asked myself, what did they do in the town? What was their favorite thing to do or, what caught their eye the most? Did they have a routine? And I combined the answers with my own impressions for the final drawings, enjoying every minute of making them.

Drawings created for the Grand Park Hotel Rovinj have been inspired by Rovinj, its hidden streets with picturesque details, as well as its rich cultural heritage. During my stay in Rovinj, aiming at the inspiration for the drawings created for the hotel, I tried as much as possible to discover and bring to life hidden and interesting locations. Many sketches were created for that occasion and they were used for my final drawings. The drawings have the character of a traveler's diary which I have been creating for the past ten years during my travels, trying to accomplish such impression for the realisation of this assignment, emphasizing what is important and not ignoring the personal impression of this experience. The bell tower of St. Euphemia is an inevitable mark and, at the same time, the most recognisable picture of Rovinj, as well as the numerous palaces in the old part of town. In these drawings, I have tried to take the traveller through the hidden streets, pointing them out with abstract motives using visual and verbal notes in order to make the traveller explore, discover and self-discover their own Rovinj. My intention was to make an impression of the traveller who makes notes of some kind of the essence of this experience, transferring that on a sketch paper, making short notes in order to achieve the impression of the slow passing of time, while bearing in mind some other times when that was a tradition and not an exception. Throughout the series of drawings,

ART
IN PARK

I have tried to leave enough freedom for each traveller to experience their own Rovinj, which will stay in their memory, and Rovinj, with its beauty, will definitely encourage them to discover more and come back to it, as well as to themselves, in the confusing and fast-paced world of today, in which there isn't enough time for those essential things. The technique I used in the series of drawings for Grand Park Hotel Rovinj is ink on paper with some collage and colour interventions.

Albaro

Lured by the siren call of the sea, and inspired by the freedom of sailing under the stars, Albaro Wellness & Spa offers a singular vision of Istrian healing.

WELLNESS & SPA

The mysterious culture of Rovinj is distilled in the night time expeditions of the batana, a modest wooden sailing vessel whose design remained unchanged for centuries. In the old dialect of Rovinj, albaro refers to a mast. When we live in balance, like a mast, we can stand strong yet flexible, resilient to the pressures of life. Because a visit to Rovinj is not complete without a lamplit evening ride in a batana, we've brought this unforgettable journey into the spa with our signature Batana Bodywork Therapy. Since ancient times, sea faring peoples have used the healing powers of seaweed, sea salt, and marine muds to heal wounds, soothe the skin, and revive the glow of youth. At Albaro Wellness & Spa, we wish to share with you these secrets of Istrian wellness. From the gifts of the sea to the cold pressed olive oil and rakijas made of hand-harvested local herbs, you can experience the most effective ingredients and therapies available to complete your wellness journey.

INTERESTING FACTS

Among the many special places in this 250-meters-long part of the hotel, we are especially proud of our Ballroom – a conference room with the largest glass wall in Europe, measuring 15 x 3 meters, offering the most magical and unobtrusive view of the Old Town of Rovinj. Every guest is welcomed to visit the Mr S's Curious Library that offers over 600 interesting titles for our book-loving guests. Did you know that 33.027 plants were planted during the construction of our Park? From the drawing board on, our goal was to be in balance with nature and be a part of it. That is the reason behind our minimal use of plastic, and other non-degradable materials. Most of the amenities used are made of wood, cardboard, recyclable plastic and similar.

TREZOR The vaults of many museums are filled with artwork that rarely sees the light of day. Occasionally, you can find one of these pieces of art in our secret room in the hotel – our Trezor. For more information, please contact our Guest Service Centre.

With St. Euphemia as a beacon of sorts, you will always find your way home whatever side of Istria you venture to. And venture you should.

ABOUT ROVINJ

The view from the Grand Park is what initially sets it apart from other hotels. It is positioned just across the bay from the Old town, with St Euphemia church and St Katarina Island as its focal points. Have a look through the window; this is one of the most recognizable vistas in the Adriatic. Did you know that Rovinj was once called Mons Rubeus (Red Hill)? One theory says that the name came from the red colour of the town's rooftops. But, when you witness the moments when the town bathes in crimson sunset light, you will know which answer we prefer. Rovinj is definitely as exciting to experience as it is to look at.

It is one of those places that manages to combine its rich and long history with modern times. The old town speaks many hidden stories that span over 1200 years of history. Rovinj is also an active fishing port, where you can experience the atmosphere of a small fishing village. The town at the foot of St Euphemia church is the favorite gathering place of artists from all around the world. Walking down its streets, you will find many art galleries and studios, whilst once a year, in August, you can attend the largest open-air exhibition of the Adriatic coast, which takes place in one of the main streets of the Old town – Grisia.

AROUND ROVINJ

ROVINJ ARCHIPELAGO The islands and the coastal strip are special landscape protection areas. Moreover, the entire coast around Rovinj is also a nature reserve, as well as the 22 islands and islets that surround it. There are many stories lurking from every corner, the most striking being the story of the death of the wealthy Venetian doge, a legend associated with the lighthouse island of St. John. If you are not interested in history though, you can simply enjoy hidden beaches and coves dotted along the coast.

THE LIM BAY For something unexpected, head north from Rovinj to the Lim Bay, a unique formation in the whole of Adriatic. After enjoying the scenery of this 12-kilometres long fjord, opt for oysters that you can eat straight from the sea.

PALUD MARSH ORNITHOLOGICAL RESERVE For more of the natural wonders, the ornithological reserve Palud is an interesting marsh area about 10 kilometers from Rovinj. Fresh and salt water, as well as marsh vegetation, provide a unique refuge and retirement for many swamp dwellers – more than 200 bird species, turtles, eels – and great photo opportunities.

ISTRIA

If you want to spend a day outdoors, explore Istria's interior and purposely get lost on its roads that cut through its famous hilly countryside. The medieval towns dotted on hills' tops – Motovun, Buzet, Grožnjan – are inviting stops for a tired traveller, offering great food and beverage options on every corner. Istria's hardworking people turned its red soil into eco farms, vast vineyards and truffle hunting forests. Istrians' close connection to nature is best seen in Istria's gastronomy and people's respect for quality dining. Just cruising on its backroads and trying the hard-to-find traditional oštarijas can bring you a surprise gastro experience. But, if you prefer a well-known establishment, don't hesitate to contact your concierge.

LONE

An interpretation of an Asian lounge and diner, with organic colours, materials and textures. Tekka by Lone Japanese Restaurant is shamelessly casual in style and visual in approach. A mix of timber and non-slippery flooring with the occasional tile detail adding singlepalette layers of colour, and its ‘sub-tropical hygge’ design makes it a beacon for guests looking for a bit of style, a bit of theatre, a bit of what they left behind in their smoggy home-town metropolises.
