from the editor

Classical music is an art form that, in many ways, begins with long periods of solitary work, from the composers who write the music on their own to the performers who spend many thousands of hours toiling at home and in practice rooms honing their craft during formative years. But in the orchestra world, when it comes time to put everything together, the individual becomes collective, and across the years, an orchestra can become something of a family.

The sense of family and interconnectedness is a through-line connecting many of this month’s performances, none more so than a pair of Lunar New Year concerts of music that celebrates family, unity and gathering together. The music-making itself is a family affair, as several members of the Orchestra’s Principal Bassoon Fei Xie family take the Orchestra Hall stage, and the February 6 concert is the Orchestra’s first Family Concert in nearly two years. Also in this issue, a new essay by award-winning writer Kao Kalia Yang reflects on family memories and traditions.

In the past two years’ time of pandemic, immediate family relationships have often taken greater importance in our lives, with many of us spending more time at home. As we appreciate and nurture those family connections, we also have greater appreciation for outings into the world that once seemed routine. Here at the Minnesota Orchestra, we thank you for your ongoing support and for being an important part of our musical family.

Finnish conductor Osmo Vänskä, the Minnesota Orchestra’s tenth music director, is renowned internationally for his compelling interpretations of the standard, contemporary and Nordic repertoires. Throughout the 2021–22 season, as Vänskä’s 19-year leadership tenure comes to a close, the Orchestra will celebrate his lasting impact through performances of Sibelius symphonies and other signature repertoire, reconnections with favorite guest soloists and the continuation of a project to perform and record all ten Mahler symphonies.

Vänskä has led the Orchestra on five major European tours, as well as a 2018 visit to London’s BBC Proms, and on historic tours to Cuba in 2015 and South Africa in 2018. He has also led the Orchestra in appearances at New York’s Carnegie Hall and Lincoln Center, Chicago’s Symphony Center and community venues across Minnesota.

Vänskä’s recording projects with the Orchestra have met with great success, including a Sibelius symphonies cycle, one album of which won the 2014 Grammy Award for Best Orchestral Performance. In February 2021 BIS released the Orchestra’s newest album, featuring Mahler’s Tenth Symphony—part of a Mahler series that includes a Grammy-nominated Fifth Symphony recording. Other recent releases include an album of in-concert recordings of Sibelius’ ‘Kullervo’ and ‘Finlandia’ and Kortekangas’ ‘Migrations’; albums of Beethoven and Tchaikovsky piano concertos with Yevgeny Sudbin and Stephen Hough, respectively; ‘To Be Certain of the Dawn’, composed by Stephen Paulus with libretto by Michael Dennis Browne; and a particularly widely-praised Beethoven symphonies cycle.

As a guest conductor, Vänskä has received extraordinary praise for his work with many of the world’s leading orchestras, including the Boston and Chicago symphony orchestras, Philadelphia Orchestra, New York Philharmonic, London Philharmonic, Berlin Philharmonic, Leipzig Gewandhaus Orchestra, Royal Concertgebouw Orchestra, Vienna Symphony, Hong Kong Philharmonic and Yomiuri Nippon Symphony Orchestra. In January 2020 he became music director of the Seoul Philharmonic Orchestra. In 2014 he became the Iceland Symphony Orchestra’s principal guest conductor; since then he has been named the ensemble’s honorary conductor. He is also conductor laureate of the Lahti Symphony Orchestra, which, during two decades as music director, he transformed into one of Finland’s flagship orchestras.

Vänskä began his music career as a clarinetist, holding major posts with the Helsinki Philharmonic and the Turku Philharmonic. Since taking up the instrument again for Sommerfest 2005 he has performed as clarinetist at Orchestra Hall, other Twin Cities venues, the Grand Teton Festival, the Mostly Mozart Festival, La Jolla Summerfest, the Seattle Chamber Music Festival, and several festivals in Finland. He has recorded Bernhard Henrik Crusell’s three Clarinet Quartets and Kalevi Aho’s Clarinet Quintet for the BIS label and is in the process of recording several duos for clarinet and violin which he has commissioned with his wife, violinist Erin Keefe.

During the 2021–22 season he is scheduled to conduct ensembles including the Antwerp Symphony Orchestra, Helsinki Philharmonic Orchestra, Netherlands Radio Philharmonic, Pittsburgh Symphony, Orchestra Orchestre National de Lyon, Seoul Philharmonic Orchestra and Tokyo Metropolitan Symphony Orchestra. In addition, he will be in residence at the Curtis Institute, where he will work with conducting fellows across a four-month span. For more information, visit minnesotaorchestra.org.
he Minnesota Orchestra, led by Music Director Osmo Vänskä, ranks among America’s top symphonic ensembles, with a distinguished history of acclaimed performances in its home state and around the world. Founded in 1903, it is known for award-winning recordings as well as for notable radio broadcasts and educational engagement programs, and a commitment to new orchestral repertoire.

music director spotlight: Antal Dorati

- In 1949 the Minnesota Orchestra, then known as the Minneapolis Symphony, welcomed its fifth music director, Antal Dorati, after Dimitri Mitropoulos’ departure to the New York Philharmonic. Like the Orchestra’s third music director, Eugene Ormandy, Dorati hailed from Budapest. He began his career as a pit conductor for opera companies, then focused on ballet and guest conducting orchestras. In 1945 he took charge of the Dallas Symphony—assigned the task of rebuilding an ensemble which had shut down during World War II.

- The hallmarks of Dorati’s 11 seasons with the Minnesota Orchestra included a clean, clear orchestral sound, as well as diversified programming, striking a balance between established repertoire and provocative new works.

- During Dorati’s tenure, the Orchestra generally spent at least seven weeks on the road each year. In 1957 he led the ensemble on its first major overseas tour, a five-week, 34,000-mile excursion sponsored by the U.S. State Department that included concerts in Eastern Europe, the Middle East, and India.

- Dorati and the Orchestra recorded extensively for Mercury Records, and their 1954 album of Tchaikovsky’s 1812 Overture—the first to use an authentic bell carillon and military cannon—remains the most popular album in the Orchestra’s entire history, selling more than a million copies, and is still in print today.

Q&A with the Chairs of Symphony Ball 2022: “Brilliance”

The Minnesota Orchestra’s Symphony Ball gala fundraiser is returning to Orchestra Hall on Saturday, May 7—and you’re invited to attend a very special evening. This year's Ball, “Brilliance,” will celebrate the Orchestra’s remarkable string of accomplishments during Osmo Vänskä’s 19-year tenure as music director, featuring a performance by the full Orchestra along with special guest Cory Wong. Symphony Ball Chairs Lisa and Bruce Paradis answered a few questions about the Ball and their connection with the Orchestra.

How did you first get involved with the Minnesota Orchestra?
We've attended subscription concerts at Orchestra Hall since moving to the Twin Cities in 1981. Lisa played classical piano and violin growing up and performed in school and community orchestras, and Bruce is an avid listener. The Minnesota Orchestra enriches our lives and the concerts nourish our souls—it’s a jewel that serves our community and brings recognition to our state by its outstanding excellence, reputation and outreach.

What has been the most exciting thing about planning Symphony Ball?
When we were asked to chair the 2022 Symphony Ball, what made it most appealing to us was the theme centering around honoring and thanking Osmo Vänskä for his 19-year tenure as music director and Erin Keefe for her first ten years serving as concertmaster. We love working with our brilliant Symphony Ball Committee making this come to life, and we’re thrilled and honored to be a part of celebrating with the Orchestra and giving back a small piece of what we receive with every performance.

How will the theme of Brilliance come through in the Ball’s activities?
The theme of Brilliance encapsulates all that Osmo and the musicians have accomplished together over the past 19 years. We have the opportunity to relive the remarkable! Brilliance will be reflected in all aspects of the evening—from iridescent décor, multi-cultural food and highlights of music from past tours, recordings, festivals and awards, along with musical pop-ups and guest artists. We’re delighted to have Cory Wong as our featured guest soloist.

What is your favorite moment of Osmo’s tenure with the Orchestra?
In August 2018, everyone in attendance at the concert in the Regina Mundi Catholic Church in Soweto, South Africa, felt the power of music come alive. The audience and musicians alike were united by the common language of music, crossing all cultural and racial divides. Music heals and unites people!

Is everyone welcome at Symphony Ball?
Yes, please come and join us! This is a time to dress up, celebrate together and feel connected to the Minnesota Orchestra family. Visit minnesotaorchestra.org/symphonyball to learn more and get your tickets!

Kathryn Nettleman appointed associate principal bass

The Minnesota Orchestra’s bass section has a familiar face as its official new second-in-command: Kathryn Nettleman, a member of the Orchestra since 2009, was appointed associate principal bass as the calendar turned to 2022. In the past decade she has served the section in a variety of leadership capacities, including acting co-principal bass from summer 2012 to February 2015 and acting associate principal bass from April 2015 through August 2021. She is also one of the Orchestra’s leading advocates for reaching out to younger audiences and, before arriving in Minnesota, was principal bass of the Hong Kong Philharmonic under former Minnesota Orchestra Music Director Edo de Waart.

“I am so happy to be appointed associate principal bass,” said Nettleman. “Our section plays with power, precision, and a thrilling intensity that distinguishes it, and I am unaware of another major orchestra with two women leading its bass section. I am proud and deeply honored to serve as associate principal bass for the amazing Minnesota Orchestra.”

That second leader is Kristen Bruya, the Orchestra’s principal bass, who commented: “I am thrilled with the appointment of Kate to the permanent position of associate principal bass. In her many years in an acting capacity in this position, Kate has demonstrated her dedication, skilled leadership, musicianship, and many other wonderful qualities that make her an excellent fit for me and the section. I am so pleased to continue making music and leading this great bass section into the future with Kate on the first stand.”

William Schrickel, a longtime Minnesota Orchestra bass player who has also served in a variety of titled roles, had been serving as acting associate principal bass for the first part of this season, and he is now returning to the assistant principal position. In addition, a new musician will be joining the Orchestra’s bass section in September 2022: Kyle Sanborn, currently a member of the Calgary Philharmonic. Congratulations to one and all!

Minnesota Orchestra wins Limelight Recording of the Year Award

As Music Director Osmo Vänskä’s tenure with the Minnesota Orchestra nears its close, new accolades are continuing to roll in—including the 2021 Recording of the Year Award from Australia’s Limelight magazine for the Orchestra’s disc of Gustav Mahler’s Tenth Symphony that was released by BIS Records in January 2021. The honor was announced by Limelight magazine and its Editor at Large Clive Paget, who interviewed Vänskä in a video that can be viewed at minnesotaorchestra.org/stories. In addition, last month the U.K.’s Guardian newspaper named the same album one of the “best classical releases of 2021.”

Vänskä and the Orchestra will continue the Mahler symphony cycle in March and June 2022 with recording sessions featuring the Ninth and Eighth symphonies. After Vänskä’s tenure with the Orchestra concludes in summer 2022, they will reunite to record the Third Symphony in a future season to complete the cycle. For more information and to add to your collection of recordings, visit minnesotaorchestra.org/shop.
critics’ column: recent concert reviews

“[W]henever Osmo Vänskä strides to the podium at Minneapolis’ Orchestra Hall to conduct a symphony by his favorite composer, Jean Sibelius, audience members may be compelled to contemplate that this moment will never be duplicated...[In the Seventh Symphony] a weighty darkness wrestled with an exhilarating transcendence, Douglas Wright’s trombone majestically soaring above the rich landscape of strings....When a liberating catharsis burst forth from the strings on the finale [of the Second Symphony], Vänskä seemed overflowing with passion on the podium, arms outstretched and upraised. It’s a work that ends in triumph, and this performance deserved that description.”
—Rob Hubbard, Star Tribune, January 1, 2022

“(T)he elegant and masterful Finnish violinist Elina Vähälä...brought the rare [original version of Sibelius’ Violin Concerto] thrillingly to life...In the end, even if the final version of Sibelius’s concerto is more concise and edited down, the earlier version had its own fire, and certainly meaty stuff for the virtuosic Vähälä to spin her magic.”
—Sheila Regan, Pioneer Press, January 8, 2022

“Although masked, the Minnesota Chorale was magnificent [in Beethoven’s Ninth Symphony], and the four vocal soloists—soprano Melody Moore, mezzo Kelley O’Connor, tenor Sean Panikkar and bass Mark S. Doss—interwove their voices beautifully, especially on their transporting final slow section....[The] performance [featured] a precise and propulsive take on the concert-opening Sinfonietta No. 1 by 20th-century American composer Coleridge-Taylor Perkinson. It’s a work for which [guest conductor Juraj] Valčuha clearly has a passion, as he’s requested it on programs he’s conducted elsewhere. He was flamboyant and demonstrative in leading the orchestra’s strings, which responded with a thrilling performance that was sad and lovely in its central slow movement.”
—Rob Hubbard, Star Tribune, November 17, 2021
“In the gray dusk, the whole of the village gathered by the river's edge. Its banks were wide and shallow. Family groups stood together.

“As the mountain clouds fell low and a coolness swept across the land, the fog rose off the water. Cloaked in the moist evening air, the people lathered themselves with soap and rinsed with water. The children splashed around like puppy dogs at the feet of their older siblings and parents.

“Only the elders waited at home. The young will come with pails of water to heat up in the fire pots so they can bathe in warmth later. On low stools by the evening fires, they heated rounds of pounded sticky rice cakes wrapped in banana leaves.

“When the family gathered, each clean, they anticipate the coming of the lunar new year celebrations around their fire rings, hands warmed by hot rice cakes, tongues sweetened by cane syrup.”

Our mother spoke quietly as she washed each of the younger children, each standing in their line in the bathtub, their knees covered by soapy water. Her words brought back her childhood. My older sister and I leaned on either side of the frame of our bathroom door to watch her bathe the children before our new year celebrations. When we were younger, we, too, knew the feel of her light fingers massaging our heads, her hands made slippery with shampoo. Outside the warmth of the small room the house felt cool and damp. The scent of freshly steamed jasmine rice filled the air. From the kitchen, we heard the whistling of our father, a tune we don't recognize, a song we don't know fills our consciousness.

“In the old country, we really believed that one had to begin the new year celebrations clean of body and heart. My mother used to tell all of us, ‘How your new year's day goes, is how the rest of your year will go.’

“It was a warning so that we would be on our best behaviors. In all the moments of familial angst, when the rough words could slip easily through our lips, we made an earnest effort to soften them, to avert our gazes, and at the very least to lower our voices and gentle our tones.”

Far away from the past, my siblings and I grew up celebrating the new year with the stories of our mother and father's memories. The ghosts of their fathers, men we'd never met, men who had died when our parents were just children, sat around us in our living rooms. We imagined one grandpa: tall and thin, bent over, elegant hands clasped on his knees on the soft cushion of our couch, watching television. We imagined the other, short and stout, sitting on grandma's old woven bamboo stool close the ground, supervising our youngest sibling in her play with wooden blocks. In the fog of family, with the nostalgia-soaked voices of our mother and the song of our father guiding us, we adventure to the parts of our stories we've never lived.

“It was a special time to be young. How we anticipated the village gatherings in the morning, the songs and the dance. How happy it made us. How warm our hearts felt despite the cool that enveloped our homes.

“All around our village, there was a flower that bloomed only around the lunar new year. It belonged to a tree. Common enough year-round with its brown trunks and fingers, each new year these trees became something other than themselves: cloaked in petals of white, they scented the entire mountainsides with a blend of citrus and sugar.”

Like our mother and father, we stand in our finest clothes at the new year community celebration. We look from the youngest to the oldest and celebrate the fact that we remain one people despite the winds of war, the forces of poverty, and the other injustices. There is a peacefulness that fills our hearts, a knowledge that somehow, even away from that river, memory flows, that far from the flowering trees, we continue to blossom. That in all the bitterness of the world, there remains: a source of sweetness in our lives, love. Always the love, first and last, a love that lasts.

Jing hu master Mr. Zhengang Xie and yue qin master Ms. Mei Hu, a husband-and-wife team, are listed as members of the elite group among the musicians in the Directory of Current Chinese Artists of 1998, which Ms. Hu participated in editing. While in China, as the top “Cheng” style Peking Opera fiddlers, Mr. Xie and Ms. Hu performed and recorded as solo jing hu and yue qin players with many top Beijing Opera houses, including the Beijing Opera House and National Opera House. In addition to performing traditional Peking Opera repertoire, Xie has participated in many new opera productions, such as the Peking Opera TV show Cao Xueqin and the new opera The Legend of The White Snake. Xie has also performed in the Great Hall of People in Beijing during a Lunar New Year celebration, and was greeted by the Chairman Jiang Zemin, among other top Chinese government officials.

Since moving to the U.S. in 1999, the couple has brought Chinese music, particularly Peking Opera, to their community. While living in Cincinnati from 2000 to 2020, Xie and Hu performed in concert halls, schools, and universities around the region. In collaborations with the University of Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra, they performed concertos such as In the Dark Night, The Qiao Family Compound and The God of Mountain. Xie and Hu currently reside in Plymouth, Minnesota, near their son, Minnesota Orchestra Principal Bassoon Fei Xie, and his family.

Fei Xie joined the Minnesota Orchestra as principal bassoon in the 2017 season after serving as principal bassoon of the Baltimore Symphony Orchestra, an ensemble he first joined as second bassoon in 2008. When he won the principal role in 2012, Xie became the first Chinese-born bassoonist to hold such a position in a major American symphony orchestra. An avid educator, Xie has taught masterclasses at conservatories and festivals throughout the U.S., China and Brazil. He has recently served on the faculty at the University of Maryland and was the bassoon coach for the inaugural season of the National Youth Orchestra of China. He was recently appointed to the faculty of the School of Music at the University of Minnesota. A native of China, Xie comes from a musical family; his parents, Zhengang Xie and Mei Hu, and his uncle are renowned Peking Opera musicians. Choi Sunghwan

Arirang Fantasy

The Korean folk song Arirang, an expression of nostalgia in the face of separation, is popular throughout the divided peninsula, serving as an unofficial national anthem. It is heard at this concert in a version written in the 1970s by North Korean composer Choi Sunghwan that was notably performed by the New York Philharmonic on its 2008 tour to North Korea and South Korea. Featuring lush Romantic harmonies and key solo moments for harp and flute, Arirang Fantasy opens with the lyrical Arirang melody, which is varied freely in the opening section, gradually increasing in speed. After a plaintive digression into minor harmonies, the music returns to a happier major key, grows faster and triumphant, then dials back to a slow, calm close.

Arirang is a song of great flexibility: its lyrics and melody have been modified over the years to such an extent that musicologists have identified about 60 principal versions and at least 3,600 variants. Its malleability has led to a variety of uses in the North and South, from protest to solidarity to sporting events. At the Opening Ceremonies of the 2018 Winter Olympics in Pyeongchang, South Korea, athletes from South Korea and North Korea marched together in unity as the song’s most common version, Jeongseon Arirang, was played.

Chen Gang/He Zhanhao

The Butterfly Lovers Violin Concerto

The Butterfly Lovers Violin Concerto is credited jointly to two composers—Chen Gang (b. 1935) and He Zhanhao (b. 1933), who collaborated on its composition in 1959 while they were students at the Shanghai Conservatory of Music. Cast in one long movement and subdivided into seven sections, the concerto is a musical representation of the Chinese legend of the Butterfly Lovers, with the solo violin representing the protagonist Zhu Yingtai, and the cello part symbolic of her lover Liang Shanbo. Chen was responsible for the majority of the concerto’s scoring, while He’s primary contribution was the work’s famous opening theme.

The concerto is scored for a standard-sized Western orchestra, and utilizes a variety of traditional Chinese techniques and styles to create a sound world suitable for its story. Among them are the use of a five-pitch pentatonic scale and a number of melodies from Chinese folk songs and from a well-known Chinese opera version of the Butterfly Lovers story. Across the concerto we follow Zhu and Liang as they meet in childhood, attend school and grow closer. The tale turns tragic as Zhu is betrothed to another man, Liang becomes ill and dies, and Zhu throws herself into Liang’s grave. In closing, the lovers’ spirits emerge as butterflies.

Trinh Cong Son/arr. Jaakko Kuusisto

Circle of Unity

The first of this concert’s two world premieres is Finnish composer Jaakko Kuusisto’s arrangement of Circle of Unity by Vietnamese composer, performer and artist Trinh Cong Son (1939-2001). Kuusisto’s arrangement, based on the version by Vietnamese musician Hô Quang Hiếu, is energetic and fast-paced, with effects including muted brass, strings sliding from one pitch to the next, shouting from the musicians, and a percussion part that imitates the sound of a high-frequency EDM-style snare.

Son, one of the great figures in 20th-century Vietnamese music and art, wrote more than 500 songs and poems, many relating to love and the hope for a peaceful Vietnam. Circle of Unity dates from 1968, in the midst of the Vietnam War, with lyrics outlining the dream of reconciliation between North and South Vietnam. In 1975, as the war was coming to an end, Son accepted an invitation to perform Circle of Unity on a radio broadcast from Saigon, urging all Vietnamese people to join hands and unite.

Wu Hua

In the Dark Night for Jing Hu and Orchestra

For In the Dark Night by Chinese composer Wu Hua (1943-2020), the Minnesota Orchestra welcomes jing hu master Mr. Zhengang Xie and yue qin master Ms. Mei Hu, a husband-and-wife team who are the parents of the Orchestra’s Principal Bassoon Fei Xie. Wu’s composition, heard here in an orchestration by Ma Jun and Han Guang, has its origins in a famous melody from the Peking Opera and showcases the jing hu—a bowed instrument with two strings—as well as the yue qin, a four-stringed lute with a distinctive round, hollow wooden body.

In the Dark Night comes from a suite by Wu describing the ill-fated story of Xiang Yu, a rebel leader during the fall of the Qin Dynasty (221-206 B.C.), and his concubine Yuji. The music begins with a low-pitched flute solo and continues with a Chinese drum passage, over which the orchestra crescendos and stops, leading to the entrance of the jing hu and yue qin. Those two featured instruments play continuously in free-flowing melodies for the rest of the piece, through varying textures, tempos and meters until the final measures, marked fff with trills and tremolos abounding.
Summer Cicadas. “In Guangxi, the weather is very hot and the cicadas are very noisy. But in the Dong minority, the most famous song is inspired by the sounds of the cicadas. The music describes a hot summer day, with young men and women looking for lovers during work breaks in the field.

Celebrating the Harvest. "A plentiful harvest is cause to celebrate in Guangxi, and I depict this celebration with sounds of percussion bands and celebratory words near the movement’s end.”

Kelly Tang
Sketches of Singapore

Contemporary Singaporean composer Kelly Tang (b. 1961), who writes in genres ranging from classical and jazz to symphonic and popular music, composed the colorful Sketches of Singapore in 2008 on a commission from the Singapore Symphony Orchestra. The score bears the following note:

“Sketches of Singapore utilizes the broad musical palette of the symphony orchestra to unlock expressive possibilities lying latent within four popular Singaporean melodies. The simple elegance of these tunes provides the ideal foundation upon which to weave elaborate textural layers, lively rhythmic elaborations, colorful tonal shading and flavorful harmonic tapestries. The development and transformation of fragments derived from these tunes generates fresh dramatic dimensions that unfold upon a symphonic canvas...The work begins with the triumphant energy of Stand Up for Singapore. Next, the folk tune Rasa Sayang is presented in the comic style of a scherzo. Cast in a passionate yet elegant orchestral glow, the deep Romantic essence of the third tune, Where I Belong, is fully unveiled. In the grand finale, the venerable Di Tanjong Katong is symphonically expanded to radiate all its innate glory.”

Gao Hong
Guangxi Impression, Concerto for Pipa and Orchestra

In the second of this week’s two world premiere performances, both commissioned by the Minnesota Orchestra, the composer herself, Gao Hong, takes the stage as the soloist in her Guangxi Impression, Concerto for Pipa and Orchestra. A full profile of Gao appears on page 21. The composer-soloist has provided the following comments on her work:

“Guangxi is a province in southern China that sports a rich diverse population that includes 48 different ethnic groups. This piece is in three movements: Dance of Tiaodan, Summer Cicadas and Celebrating the Harvest.

Dance of Tiaodan. “The first movement depicts Tiaodan people as they carry goods on their shoulders with bamboo sticks. The music describes the people as they work happily in the field. People one-by-one come from far away with the bamboo sticks on their shoulders, creating ‘biandan’ up and down movements which simulates dancing.

Spring Festival Overture is the most famous composition of Chinese composer Li Huanzhi (1919-2000)—music so beloved that it was among a small number of musical works launched into space in 2007 on China’s first lunar probe, Chang’e 1.

The overture is the first and best-known movement of Li’s four-part Spring Festival Suite, composed in 1955 and 1956. It depicts a scene in the Shanbei region of revelers celebrating the Lunar New Year, also known as the Spring Festival, and the music’s themes come from that region’s folk music. In the overture we hear sounds reminiscent of fireworks and parades, along with a gentler inner passage that is built on a traditional melody conveying greetings for the New Year as well as prayers for peace and good fortune.

Chin: Frontispiece
Contemporary composer Unsuk Chin describes Frontispiece as “a time lapse...of the history of music” comprising countless tiny musical fragments and gestures that are sometimes jarring, sometimes calm and never predictable. Among the composers alluded to—but not quoted—are Bruckner, Ives, Webern and Boulez.

Mozart: Violin Concerto No. 4
Mozart's penultimate violin concerto is virtuosic music packed with surprises. In the opening movement, the orchestra recedes and the soloist takes command, gracefully elaborating on the themes; the Andante cantabile is pure song with the second of the work's two cadenzas; and the Rondeau finale is music fit for a French court, incorporating a tune Mozart encountered in Strasbourg.

Stravinsky: The Firebird
The heroic Prince Ivan and a magical Firebird are revealed with brilliant orchestral colors. The gentle dance of captive princesses, the prince's effort to free them, and the evil sorcerer's defeat by the Firebird—all is painted in the most vivid musical imagery.

Baiba Skride, violin

Artistic meditations on the music of past generations can take all shapes and sizes. Late last year, for instance, fans of the Beatles partook in a new eight-hour-long documentary on the recording of just a single album, Let It Be. Unsuk Chin’s 2019 orchestral work Frontispiece swings in the other direction, combining a sweeping scale of ambition with a brevity of expression, presenting a time lapse of symphonic music history across a mere eight minutes.

Frontispiece is the second work by the South Korean-born composer to receive its American premiere by the Minnesota Orchestra this season; Chin’s subito con forza was featured at a pair of concerts in late October. These two pieces share some conceptual DNA in that both look to great composers of the past. In the case of subito con forza, the scope is limited to just one composer, Ludwig van Beethoven, whereas Frontispiece references classical composers as disparate as Anton Bruckner, Charles Ives, Pierre Boulez and Anton von Webern, among others.

Chin is quick to emphasize that Frontispiece is built not on direct musical quotations, but rather on allusions, subtle references and unexpected interactions as various composers and styles cross paths and mingle. Like many of her works, it is music of high difficulty—fitting her stated belief that when she is composing for high-caliber ensembles, she wants “to drive these good musicians to their limits.” It is scored for a large orchestra, most notably including a super-sized brass section that includes six horn players, four trumpets and four trombones. Also featured are a wide array of percussion instruments and piano, the instrument Chin played in her youth before turning to composition.

Frontispiece was commissioned by Germany’s NDR Elbphilharmonie Orchester and premiered by that ensemble on September 6, 2019, with the work’s dedicatee Alan Gilbert conducting. The word referenced in the title is both an architectural term as well as the name of an illustration facing a book’s title page. The composer has provided the following comments:

“Frontispiece for Orchestra was commissioned by the NDR Elbphilharmonie Orchester to open Alan Gilbert’s inaugural season as their Chief Conductor. This occasion prompted me to write a short piece which presents a time lapse of a kind of the history of music: certain aspects of a number of key symphonic works of different epochs are being evoked and poured into new moulds by letting them interact and comment upon each other. These are never actual style quotations—mere allusions, and faint references.

“On the level of details, the work consists of many tiny fragments which all refer to gestures typical to certain works and composers, and these are being ‘translated’ to each other in numerous different and occasionally unexpected ways. As to give but a few examples: certain chord sequences by Anton Bruckner are interpreted in a manner akin to Anton von Webern, splinters of Strauss, Scriabin and Stravinsky collide, Brahmsian harmony passes through the prisms of, say, Charles Ives, and certain material from Tchaikovsky’s Sixth Symphony—Heaven forbid—is being presented a la manière de Pierre Boulez.

“This process of ‘translating’ happens on several levels: diverse materials and gestures, ranging from Baroque music all the way to the avant-garde, are being transcribed and transformed in an alienating manner so that something very different arises as a sum of their interactions. All of this happens at a rather microscopic level: all aforementioned allusions, as well as other ones, are not immediately perceivable, and it is most certainly not necessary to trace them in order to be able to ‘understand’ the piece. On the level of the macrostructure, the work’s form is being held together by a certain chord, which could be called its supporting pillar—a chord which, by way of exception, is completely autarchic.

“Frontispiece reflects on my decades-long experiences with landmark works of the symphonic literature as composer and recipient. In extracting distinct aspects of works of certain composers, Anton von Webern’s art of revealing a ‘universe in a nutshell’ by means of extreme compression served as a particular inspiration.”

about the composer

Born in Seoul in 1961, Chin has lived in Berlin since 1988, and her music is described by her publisher Boosey & Hawkes as “modern in language, but lyrical and non-doctrinaire in communicative power.” She is routinely commissioned by leading musical organizations, and her works have been showcased at major festivals and concert series in Asia, Europe and North America by ensembles such as the Berlin Philharmonic, Leipzig Gewandhaus Orchester, BBC Symphony Orchester, New York...
Philharmonic, Los Angeles Philharmonic and Tokyo Symphony. She has also composed an opera, Alice in Wonderland, along with works for chamber ensembles, solo piano, voices and electronics. Initially self-taught in music, she studied composition at Seoul National University as well as with György Ligeti at the Hochschule für Musik and Theater Hamburg.

Chin has been a composer in residence for numerous ensembles, most notably serving an 11-year tenure with the Seoul Philharmonic Orchestra, where she founded and oversaw its contemporary music series. From 2011 to 2020 she served as artistic director of the “Music of Today” series of the Philharmonia Orchestra in London, and in 2022 she is beginning a five-year appointment as artistic director of the Tongyeong International Festival in South Korea. She recently earned the 2021 Leonie Sonning Music Prize, adding to her long list of honors that includes one of the most prestigious and lucrative prizes in classical composition, the Grawemeyer Award, conferred in 2004 for her Violin Concerto.

In addition to Frontisphere and subito con forza, Chin’s recent large-scale works include Chant des Enfants des Étoiles for choirs and orchestra, premiered within the inaugural events at the Lotte Concert Hall in Seoul in 2016; Chorós Chordón, which the Berlin Philharmonic took to Asia in 2017; and SPIRA, a concerto for orchestra premiered in 2019 by the Los Angeles Philharmonic. Her newest work, Violin Concerto No. 2, Scherben der Stille, was scheduled to receive its world premiere last month by the London Symphony Orchestra and soloist Leonidas Kavakos under the direction of Sir Simon Rattle.

Instrumentation: 3 flutes (1 doubling alto flute and 1 doubling piccolo), 3 oboes (1 doubling English horn), 3 clarinets (1 doubling E-flat clarinet), 2 bassoons, contrabassoon, 6 horns, 4 trumpets, 4 trombones, tuba, timpani, 2 snare drums, bass drum, cymbals, 3 suspended cymbals, gong, guiro, metal blocks, 2 tambourines, tam-tam, temple blocks, triangle, glockenspiel, vibraphone, chimes, marimba, harp, piano (doubling celeste) and strings

Program note by Carl Schroeder.

Wolfgang Amadè Mozart’s father Leopold—an eminent violinist and pedagogue—believed that his prodigiously talented son could be “the greatest violinist in Europe,” and things got off to a promising start. By the age of seven, young Mozart was playing the violin in family trios, though he later expressed a preference for the viola, so that he could get into the center of the harmonies. Before long, however, he gravitated to the great new invention of the day, the piano, and his preference for the keyboard led him to compose a cache of piano concertos of a quantity—23 mature works—equalled by none other.

Although the majority of Mozart’s concertos are for piano, violin soloists were not left empty-handed. There are five violin concertos, plus a couple of miscellaneous movements, the Concertone for Two Violins, and the Sinfonia concertante for violin and viola. Mozart was just 19 when he produced his five violin concertos, all dating from 1775. The first two, now seldom displayed, tend to be conventional in nature, reflecting the works he grew up with in his father’s household. But No. 3, finished in September of that year, shows a spurt in Mozart’s musical growth, which he continued to exhibit in the Nos. 4 and 5, finished in October and December respectively. The D-major Concerto No. 4 is crammed with surprises, the first of which is that it is more virtuosic than its predecessors.

The opening Allegro abounds with opportunities for display, affording us some idea of the composer’s prowess, for these works were written for his own use. Once the orchestra has introduced the principal ideas, it takes a definite backstep to the soloist, accompanying and doubling rather than asserting itself in genuine dialogue fashion. When the themes return with the soloist, for whom they were designed all along, the lines wear their new adornments quite naturally, as if the laces of violin arpeggios and figurations should have been there in the first place.

Igor Stravinsky

The Firebird, complete ballet (original 1910 version)
Premiered: June 25, 1910

In 1909, following a successful visit of the Ballets Russes to Paris, the Russian impresario Serge Diaghilev and his choreographer Mikhail Fokine made plans for a new ballet to be presented in Paris the following season, based on the old Russian legend of the Firebird. They at first asked Anatoly Lyadov to compose the music, but when it became clear that the notoriously lazy Lyadov would never get around to it, they decided to take a chance on a young composer who had orchestrated some pieces for the Ballets Russes the year before. His name was Igor Stravinsky, and he was virtually unknown.

Recognizing that this was his big chance (and terrified that he would not be up to the challenge), Stravinsky set to work in November 1909 at a dacha owned by the Rimsky-Korsakov family (to which he had gone, as he said, “for a vacation in birch forests and snow-fresh air”). He finished the piano score in St. Petersburg in March, and the orchestration was complete a month later. The first performance took place in Paris on June 25, 1910, eight days after the composer’s 28th birthday, and it was a huge success. Stravinsky would go on to write quite different music over the course of his long career, but the music from The Firebird—now a century old—remains his most popular creation.

A magical tale

The Firebird tells of a young prince, Ivan Tsarevich, who unknowingly pursues the magic Firebird—part woman, part bird—into the garden of the green-taloned Kastchei, most horrible of all ogres: Kastchei captures and imprisons maidens within the castle and turns all knights who come to rescue them to stone. Ivan captures the Firebird, but she begs to be released, and when he agrees she gives him a magic feather and vanishes. The prince sees a group of 13 princesses playing with golden apples, and when dawn breaks and they have to return to Kastchei’s castle, he follows them. Instantly he is confronted by the hideous fiends who inhabit the castle and is about to be turned to stone himself when he remembers the feather. He waves it, and the Firebird returns, putting Kastchei and all the other ogres to sleep, and showing him where a magic egg is hidden in a casket. When Ivan smashes the egg, Kastchei and his fiends disappear, the petrified knights return to life, the maidens are freed, Kastchei’s castle is transformed into a cathedral, and Ivan marries the most beautiful of the princesses.

The complete ballet music

These concerts present the score of The Firebird as it was performed at the premiere of the ballet in Paris in June 1910—about 45 minutes of music—rather than the more frequently performed 1919 suite in which the duration is more than halved.

The ominous Introduction, in the unusual key of A-flat minor, hints at the music that will be associated with the monsters; near the end of this section comes one of Stravinsky’s most striking orchestral effects, a series of rippling string glissandos played entirely in harmonics. The Enchanted Garden of Kastchei leads to music that Stravinsky omitted from the suites, the Appearance of the Firebird, Pursued by Prince Ivan, full of trills and tremolos from the strings. The music proceeds without pause into the shimmering, whirling Dance of the Firebird and The Firebird’s Variation, which contained Stravinsky’s own favorite music from this score. But between these comes the unfamiliar Capture of the Firebird by Prince Ivan, full of quick-paced staccato writing that concludes with ringing horn attacks.

Appearance of the Thirteen Enchanted Princesses is marked by shimmering string chords, followed by a series of woodwind and violin solos and culminating in a flute cadenza. As Prince Ivan watches, the princesses engage in their Game with the Golden Apples, which bustles along energetically on its steady rhythmic pulse. Stravinsky was later critical of this movement, calling it too “Mendelssohnian-Tchaikovskyan,” but it is brilliant music, and it makes an effective scene in the ballet. The Sudden Appearance of Prince Ivan, with its striking horn solos, accompanies Ivan Tsarevich’s entry into the garden. The music now proceeds into the familiar Khorovod, or Round Dance. One of the intentions of Diaghilev and Fokine had been to make The Firebird as “Russian” as possible, and in The Princesses’ Khorovod Stravinsky uses the old Russian folk-tune “In the Garden.” Announced by solo oboe as the 13 captive princesses dance in the castle garden, the melody is taken over by the violins and extended in the ballet’s most lyric section.

The Khorovod comes to a peaceful close, and it is here that listeners will find a long sequence of unfamiliar music. In the familiar suites, the Khorovod gives way to the Infernal Dance of All Kastchei’s Subjects, but in the complete ballet a number of scenes separate these two movements. Daybreak, with its fierce trumpet calls, leads to the Magic Carillon: bells ring wildly as Kastchei’s monsters appear—to violent music—and take Prince Ivan captive. Kastchei the Immortal then enters on a series of brass fanfares and threatens Ivan. The princesses intercede to little avail before the Firebird herself enters and gradually puts Kastchei’s minions to sleep. Only now does the great Infernal Dance of All Kastchei’s Subjects explode to life in one of the most violent orchestral attacks ever written. Sharply syncopated rhythms and barbaric snorts from the low brass depict the fiends’ efforts to resist the Firebird’s spell; without the slightest relaxation or slowing of tempo this dance powers its way to a dazzling (and ear-splitting) close on a great rip of sound. In its aftermath, solo bassoon sings the gentle, almost lugubrious Berceuse, the music with which the Firebird lulls Kastchei and his followers to sleep.

In the familiar suites, the Berceuse leads without pause into the Finale. In the ballet, however, Kastchei does not remain conveniently asleep but comes back to life to the sound of contrabassoons, then bassoons, then the entire wind and brass sections. The Firebird lulls him not to sleep but to death (deep string chords), and this leads through a magical passage for tremolo strings into the Finale. Here solo French horn sings the main theme, based on another Russian folksong, “By the Gate.” Beginning quietly, this noble tune simply repeats, growing in strength as it recurs, and the ballet drives to its magnificent conclusion.

Instrumentation: 3 flutes, piccolo (1 flute also doubling piccolo), 3 oboes, English horn, 3 clarinets (1 doubling E-flat clarinet), bass clarinet, 3 bassoons, contrabassoon (1 bassoon also doubling contrabassoon), 4 horns, 3 trumpets, 3 trombones, tuba, timpani, bass drum, cymbals, tambourine, tam-tam, triangle, glockenspiel, xylophone, 3 harps, piano, celesta and strings; offstage: 3 trumpets, 2 tenor Wagner tuben, 2 bass Wagner tuben, bells

Program Notes

Perry: Short Piece for Orchestra
Perry’s humbly named A Short Piece for Orchestra is symmetrical in form, beginning and ending with vigor. One inner episode is moderately paced and strongly melodic, and another is full of pensive melancholy and falling melodic lines.

R. Strauss: Don Quixote
Strauss captures the humor and humanity of Cervantes’ great novel in a magnificent work spotlighting solo cello. With Don Quixote portrayed by the cello and his long-suffering squire, Sancho Panza, primarily by the viola, the music depicts their escapades in a series of colorful variations. Among the most famous: the Don's battles with windmills and an unsuspecting flock of sheep, and an encounter with his imagined, idealized lady love, Dulcinea.

Rachmaninoff: Symphonic Dances
Rachmaninoff’s final composition is full of rhythmic energy and colorful orchestration. The alto saxophone makes a rare orchestral appearance in this three-movement work, which closes with a breathtaking setting of the Dies Irae.

Jean-Guihen Queyras, cello
Cellist Jean-Guihen Queyras makes his Minnesota Orchestra debut in these performances. He has given world premieres of works by, among others, Ivan Fedele, Gilbert Amy, Bruno Mantovani, Michael Jarrell, Johannes-Maria Staud, Thomas Larcher and Tristan Murail. He was a founding member of the Arcanto Quartet and forms a celebrated trio with Isabelle Faust and Alexander Melnikov; and collaborated with zarp specialists Bijan and Keyvan Chemirani on a Mediterranea programme. Queyras often appears with renowned orchestras such as the Philadelphia Orchestra, the Symphonieorchester des Bayerischen Rundfunks, Mahler Chamber Orchestra, the Orchestre de Paris, London Symphony Orchestra, the Gewandhausorchester and the Tonhalle Orchestra Zurich. His recordings of cello concertos by Edward Elgar, Antonín Dvořák, Philippe Schoeller and Gilbert Amy have been released to critical acclaim. More: jeanguihenqueyras.com.

Karina Canellakis, conductor
Internationally acclaimed for her emotionally charged performances, technical command and interpretive depth, Karina Canellakis regularly appears with the top orchestras of North America, Europe, the U.K. and Australia. She is the chief conductor of the Netherlands Radio Philharmonic Orchestra, and concurrently holds the title of principal guest conductor with both the London Philharmonic Orchestra and Rundfunk-Sinfonieorchester Berlin. Her 2021-22 season includes significant debuts with the Chicago Symphony Orchestra, National Symphony Orchestra and San Francisco Symphony, as well as return engagements with the Los Angeles Philharmonic and Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra. She is also active on the operatic stage and is known to many in the classical music world for her virtuoso violin playing. More: opus3artists.com.

William Eddins, host and writer
For the concert on Friday, February 25, William Eddins serves as host and writer of the Twin Cities PBS broadcast and online livestream, This Is Minnesota Orchestra. Earlier this season Eddins served in this same role for the New Year's Eve and Lunar New Year concerts. A full profile appears on page 22.

_to Europe and back_

Raised in Ohio in a musical family, Perry found childhood success as a violinist and singer. She won a scholarship to attend Westminster Choir College, where she was the orchestra’s concertmaster, and after graduating she pursued further studies in composition and conducting. Like many young composers of the period, she gravitated to Paris for composition instruction with the famous pedagogue Nadia Boulanger. In the 1950s she earned several high honors including two Guggenheim Fellowships, which allowed for an extended stay in Italy studying with Luigi Dallapiccola.

After returning to the U.S. in the late 1950s, she enjoyed several high career triumphs including the New York Philharmonic’s 1965 performance and recording of Short Piece for Orchestra, at that point revised under the title Study for Orchestra. Sadly she suffered from ill health and a stroke that caused partial paralysis and slowed her composing activities—though she taught herself to write left-handed to allow for continued work. When she died at age 55 in 1979 she left a varied catalog of 12 symphonies, three concertos, three operas, a particularly admired Stabat Mater, and an assortment of shorter orchestral pieces, chamber music and vocal compositions, among other works.

_short but ambitious_

Many of Perry’s early works were focused on voice and influenced by the spiritual style. Her 1952 Short Piece for Orchestra dates from the period when her focus shifted primarily to instrumental writing, often in the modern neoclassical style and incorporating more frequent dissonance. Short Piece was introduced in 1952 by the Turin Symphony. Of historical significance is the New York Philharmonic’s note on the piece from its 1965 performance, which marked only the third time the ensemble had performed music by a woman, and the first by a woman of color.

“The score is a strongly symmetrical structure. The introduction, with its garish, angular thematic line etched in octaves by strings and woodwinds with horns, is punctuated by heavy, syncopated brass chords. This vigorous mood and tempo provide the framework of the entire piece, returning twice to alternate with contrasting material and a third time to conclude the score.

“The first contrasting episode, in a more moderato tempo, is strongly melodic. Here a principal melody is given first by solo flute, then by oboe, clarinet and horn. The short central section is dominated by a vigorous dotted rhythm carried by the bassoons and later taken over by the viola section. The third episode is one of pensive melancholy, with flute, solo violin, oboe and other instruments imitating each other’s gracefully falling melodic line. The closing page recalls once more the vigorous opening.”

Instrumentation: 2 flutes, piccolo, 2 oboes, English horn, 2 clarinets, bass clarinet, 2 bassoons, contrabassoon, 4 horns, 3 trumpets, 2 trombones, tuba, timpani, field drum, bass drum, suspended cymbal, xylophone, harp, piano (doubling celesta) and strings

_Don Quixote, Fantastic Variations on a Theme of Knightly Character, Opus 35_

Premiered: March 8, 1898

_In 1896, just after finishing Also sprach Zarathustra, Richard Strauss set to work on a new project, one that would take him in entirely new directions. Strauss at first planned to write a tone poem based on events from Miguel de Cervantes’ Don Quixote. But rather than writing a straightforward tone poem, Strauss made his task more complicated by casting his new work as a set of variations based on a collection of themes associated with Don Quixote, his sidekick Sancho Panza and his idealized love Dulcinea. Then, to bring yet one more dimension to this music, Strauss conceived it as a virtuoso work for cello and orchestra,_ with the solo cellist cast in the role of Don Quixote. Strauss completed the score in December 1897, and the premiere took place on March 6, 1898, in Cologne.

Don Quixote is a great showpiece for the solo cello—but we should not overlook the other players Strauss assigns important solo roles in this music. The part of Sancho Panza is first announced by bass clarinet and tenor tuba and thereafter undertaken mostly by the solo viola, which plays the role of the longsuffering squire; at key moments the solo violin contributes to the portrait of Don Quixote.

a story in variations

Don Quixote consists of an introduction, a statement of the principal themes, ten variations and a finale. Strauss depicted only a few of the many incidents in Cervantes’ novel and felt free to alter their order in his own presentation.

Introduction. Here are most of the important themes that will evolve across the span of Don Quixote, initially presented not by the soloists but by the orchestra. At the very beginning comes the little flute tune that will reappear in many forms, followed by a lilting idea for second violins that Strauss marks grazioso and a clarinet swirl followed by a three-chord cadence; all of these will be associated with Don Quixote himself.

Soon the solo oboe sings a gentle melody depicting the Don’s idealized lady-love and patroness, the fair Dulcinea. Trumpets mark his resolve to defend her, but quickly this noble beginning turns complex and dissonant as Don Quixote loses himself in dreams of knight-errantry. In Cervantes’ words: “through his little sleep and much reading, he dried up his brains in such sort, as he wholly lost his judgment.” The music reaches a point of shrieking dissonance—Don Quixote’s mind has snapped—and heroic fanfares break off in silence.

Don Quixote and Sancho Panza. Out of that silence, the solo cello is heard for the first time, presenting the Don’s themes, now in a minor key. Quickly we meet Sancho Panza, and it is no accident that we move to a major key for the genial sidekick: bass clarinet and tenor tuba sing a rustic duet that introduces the squire, and the viola quickly takes this up, going on and on like Sancho himself.

Battle with the Windmills. The main characters having been introduced, the music proceeds directly into Variation I. Don Quixote and Sancho’s themes are sounded simultaneously as they head out for their first adventure. It comes immediately: Don Quixote mistakes windmills for giants and rides to the attack. A sharp thump knocks the aged knight from his horse, and he recovers slowly on thoughts of Dulcinea.

Battle with the Sheep. In the famous second variation, Quixote mistakes a flock of sheep for the armies of the evil Emperor Alifanfaron. Their bleating is memorably suggested by flutter-tongued minor seconds from the winds, while viola tremolos depict the cloud of dust they raise. Don Quixote charges into the flock, dispersing the terrified sheep and riding off in triumph as the shepherds howl.

Don Quixote and His Squire Converse. In the third and longest of the variations, Don Quixote speaks grandly of heroic deeds while Sancho chatters incessantly. Finally the knight cuts him off with a violent gesture, and the two head off in search of new adventures.

Battle with the Pilgrims. In variation four, the pair come upon a religious procession (solemn bassoon and brass chords) and ride to the attack; they are knocked flat and left lying in the dust as the procession fades into the distance.

The Knight’s Vigil. Don Quixote ruminates on his ideals in the moonlight as soft winds blow in the background.

The Meeting with Dulcinea. Variation six opens with a jaunty oboe duet: the Don and Sancho have come upon three peasant girls, and Sancho convinces the knight that they are his beloved Dulcinea del Toboso and her retinue, but that they have been transformed by an enchanter. Don Quixote tries to pay homage to this coarse country maid, but the cackling girls flee in confusion.

The Ride Through the Air. In the seventh variation, the Don and Sancho are convinced to mount a hobby horse, believing that it will carry them through the air; the wind howls around them, but the two remain firmly rooted to the earth.

The Voyage in the Enchanted Boat. Variation eight brings the pair to an abandoned rowboat. They ride out into the stream but head toward a weir, tip over and fall in; once on shore, they wring out their clothes (pizzicato notes echo the water dripping from their sopping clothes).

The Combat with the Two Magicians. Here the adventurers encounter a pair of Benedictine monks chatting happily as they come down the road (two bassoons in busy counterpoint). Don Quixote rides to the attack and sends the terrified monks fleeing.

The Defeat of Don Quixote. In variation ten, a well-intentioned neighbor dresses as a knight, jousts with Quixote and defeats him. The vanquished knight is sent home under orders to give up knight-errantry for a year, and the pounding timpani pedal suggests his homeward journey in disgrace.

Finale: The Death of Don Quixote. In the Finale, the Don’s fevered imagination gradually clears—the dissonances heard during the up into powerful movements that almost overflow with rhythmic energy.

non allegro. The music opens with some of these fragments, just bits of sound from the first violins, and over them the English horn sounds the three-note pattern that will permeate this work, reappearing across its span in endless forms. Rachmaninoff plays it up into a great climax, which subsides as the opening fragments lead to the central episode, sung at first entirely by woodwinds.

This slow interlude—the reedy sound of the alto saxophone is exactly right for this wistful music—makes its way back to the big gestures of the beginning section, now energized by explosive timpani salvos. In the closing moments, Rachmaninoff rounds matters off with a grand chorale for strings, beautifully accompanied by the glistening sound of bells, piano, harp, piccolo and flutes, and the movement winks into silence on the fragments with which it began.

andante con moto (tempo di valse). The opening of the second movement takes us into a completely different sound-world with the icy tones of trumpets and horns, played forte but stopped. Rachmaninoff calls for a waltz tempo, but he sets the music in the untraditional meters of 6/8 and 9/8 and has the waltz introduced by the unlikely sound of solo English horn. This music evolves through several episodes, some soaring, some powerful, before subsiding in a sudden, almost breathless close.

lento assai–allegro vivace. The slow introduction to the final movement is enlivened by the strings’ interjections of the three-note pattern. Gradually these anneal into the Allegro vivace, and off the movement goes, full of rhythmic energy and the sound of ringing bells. A central episode in the tempo of the introduction sings darkly; after wonderful sounds including eerie string glissandos, the Allegro vivace returns to rush the Symphonic Dances to a close guaranteed to rip the top off a concert hall.

Instrumentation: 2 flutes, piccolo, 2 oboes, English horn, 2 clarinets (1 doubling E-flat clarinet), bass clarinet, 3 bassoons, contrabassoon, 6 horns, 3 trumpets, 3 trombones, tuba, tenor tuba, timpani, bass drum, cymbals, bells, snare drum, tambourine, triangle, wind machine, harp and strings
