

Growing Tribal Economies. Strengthening Tribal Finance.

Financial Reporting and Information Guide for Tribal Governments and Enterprises (Orange Book)

The accounting, financial reporting, and information needs of tribes and related entities differ significantly from those of a state or local government, non-profit or an international corporation. The Orange Book addresses the complex economic activity and related entity differences and presents an overview of the financial reporting framework in a tribal setting.

The Orange Book includes ten chapters covering financial reporting for both government and business activities, federal tax and information reporting, and fiduciary responsibilities, as well as a sample set of a tribe's financial statements.
