	Microgrid Energy Servers for Energy Sovereignty, Cost Savings, and Decarbonization on Tribal Lands
3:00 p.m 4:30 p.m.	The reliance of Tribal Nations on a dated, unreliable, and unsustainable electrical grid impedes their ability to serve and protect their communities and to make progress in preserving the health of their land through decarbonization efforts. As the climate changes, extreme hot and cold temperatures are adding stress to the grid and exacerbating pollution, while major weather events are increasing the frequency and severity of power outages that can devastate vulnerable rural communities. In this session, attendees will learn that, by generating their own electricity through microgrid energy servers, Tribal Nationscan become independent of an outdated external power source and polluting back-up diesel generators, provide highly-reliable energy to their communities. save or even make money, and shrink their carbon footprint. This is a pathway to meaningful energy sovereignty. Panelists: • Jennifer Colosimo, Midi Enterprises, LLC • Blair Gallagher, Midi Enterprises, LLC • David Baugh, Bloom Energy, Corp.	Isanti 3
3:00 p.m 4:30 p.m.	New Opportunities for Tribal Tax Parity in the New Republican-Controlled Congress Join us for a discussion on tribal tax parity that will focus on opportunities to move Tribal Nation priorities forward in the Republican-controlled House of Representatives. Topics will include: • Administration and tax treatment of tribal general welfare programs and payments; • Tribal Treasury Advisory Committee (TTAC) General Welfare Program Regulations; • Tribal tax-exempt bonds; • Tribal pension plans; • Adoption tax credits for tribal courts ,and to continue other tribal tax credits; and • Treasury guidance on tribally chartered corporations. range of tribal programs including housing, health care, education, and social services. Unfortunately, American Indians and Alaska Natives who live on tribal lands were reported to have experienced an undercount of 5.64 percent, the highest of any population group in the 2020 Census. This breakout session offers an update on efforts undertaken by Native organizations to improve the accuracy of census and other federal survey data. It will include a discussion of proposed changes to the federal standards for identifying "American Indians and Alaska Natives," balancing privacy protections against the need for accurate data, and initiatives undertaken to address the continuing undercounts of urban Natives and those living on tribal lands. The breakout session will provide information on how you can get involved with the census working group and help preparations as we begin to get ready for the 2030 Census and make sure that Natives Count.

5:00 p.m 6:30 p.m.	Briefings on Federal Rulemaking for Protections on Public Lands: Mature and Old Growth Forests and Areas of Critical Environmental Concern	Isanti 3

In 2022, the Affiliated Tribes of Northwest Indians (ATNI) and the National Congress of American Indians (NCAI) adopted resolutions requesting that the Department of Agriculture and Department of the Interior initiate a rulemaking process to conserve mature and old-growth forests and trees on ancestral land managed by the U.S. Forest Service (USFS) and the Bureau of Land Management (BLM). resolutions urged the protection of mature and old-growth federal forests and trees from avoidable logging, subject to limited exceptions. Both recognized the overriding importance of these forests and trees to traditional ways of life, the extraordinary carbon storage and sequestration role they play, their central position in fighting the climate crisis that threatens tribal communities, their widespread loss since colonization and settlement, and the continuing threat to these forests and trees from forest management activities approved by USFS and BLM. On May 21, 2023, the USFS issued an Advance Notice of Proposed Rulemaking (ANPR) focused on "climate resilience." The ANPR contains a series of questions and issues about which the agency solicits feedback, including how to best retain and expand mature and old-growth forests and trees. In this session, we will discuss how we can support Tribal Nations interested in providing comments to the agencies, particularly on mature forest and tree protection.

Update on the "Conservation and Landscape Health Rule," which is intended to better balance conservation with other uses on BLM lands and establishes a framework for managing lands to ensure balanced decision-making. The draft rule clarifies that conservation is a "use" within the Federal Land Policy Management Act's (FLPMA's) "multiple use" framework and revises existing regulations to better meet the requirement that BLM prioritizes designating and protecting Areas of Critical Environmental Concern (ACEC) where special management is required to protect important lands. In addition, the rule creates a new series of tools to promote ecosystem resilience that includes conservation leasing and compensatory mitigation. The draft rule allows Tribal Nations to provide comments on how BLM provides effective stewardship in the face of the twin challenges of climate change and biodiversity loss and is a generational opportunity to improve how the largest land manager in the nation addresses conservation, restoration, and resilience.

	Both comment periods close on June 20, 2023.

The FCC is on track to launch an updated version of the current maps in Spring 2023 based on updated location data and availability data as-of December 31, 2022. The BDC invites stakeholders to participate in efforts to verify and validate both the locations on the map and the broadband availability data submitted by ISPs in order to refine and improve the data shown on the maps. Along with the FCC's own verification efforts, stakeholders may file challenges to the data depicted on the maps. Participation in the challenge processes by governmental entities (and Tribal entities in particular), as well as consumers, service providers, and third parties will help ensure that each iteration of the map evolves to more accurately represent the facts on the ground. In this session on the BDC, FCC staff will review the ways that tribal governments and entities can participate in the BDC and, in doing so, help improve the accuracy of the maps. Staff will focus on the various challenge processes created as part of the BDC and demonstrate how to engage with the	Isanti 1

The Positive Impacts of Relative Caregivers on Native Children

3:00 p.m. - 4:30 p.m.

Research affirms what American Indian/Alaska Native people have always known to be true: children do better when they are raised with family. Studies show that children who can't stay in their own homes have better educational, health, and social outcomes with relative caregivers than they do in foster care with strangers. This is especially important for Native children. One percent of children in the U.S. are American Indian or Alaska Native, yet 2% of children in foster care are Native, and 8% of children living with relative caregivers are Native.

In this session, participants will learn about the newly-established Grandfamilies and Kinship Care Network, a federally funded national technical assistance center for Tribal Nations and states led by Generations United, and the National Indian Child Welfare Association's role in it. Relative caregivers will share their experience raising relative children, including the joys and challenges. They will highlight their needs, including services and supports that would better assist them in caring for their relative children. Strategies for aligning tribal child welfare policy with the needs of relative caregivers will also be shared, as well as opportunities for technical assistance and resources to support Tribal Nations and states in better coordinating their services to support relative caregivers.

Uplifting Tribal Energy Sovereignty through a Just Transition

Since 2010. GRID Alternatives has worked with tribal communities across the United States to support their renewable energy goals and visions for a sustainable future through tribally focused programs. Since 2018, the Tribal Solar Accelerator Fund (TSAF), a tribal-led program, has partnered with over 65 Tribal Nations and 40 tribal individuals to support renewable energy development and leadership development goals. Over the last four years, the TSAF has provided Tribal Nations with access to philanthropic capital through competitive grantmaking and leadership development programs. At its core, TSAF is about more than just regranting; it's about mobilizing and developing tribal solar projects and integrating workforce development and training, nation-building, and strengthening the energy resilience of tribal communities with visions for a clean energy outlook for generations to come. The upfront expenses to install and maintain solar systems are out of reach for many tribal communities, which is why TSAF funding has been critical to each grantee we have supported.

Tribal leaders, tribal organizations and everyone in between will learn about the unique and innovative ways the TSAF

3:00 p.m 4:30 p.m.	Water Over Nickel: Protecting Indigenous Communities and Environments from the Negative Impacts of Mining The push to electrify vehicles is critical to meeting national and international goals to reduce emissions and slow global warming. But the materials—like nickel—used to produce electric vehicle batteries are often mined from the earth using environmentally damaging practices. And 97% of nickel deposits in the U.S. are located within 35 miles of Native American reservations. While advancements in green technology are critical to protecting our planet from the effects of climate change, we must ensure these advancements do not endanger our natural resources or Indigenous communities. Water Over Nickel aims to raise collective awareness of the risks associated with the Tamarack Mine, a nickel mine proposed by Talon Metals Corp. The proposed mine is located just 1.3 miles from the homes of tribal members at Round Lake, and near cultural sites and resources, including Rice Lake and Sandy Lake. The discussion will focus on the risks nickel mines like the proposed Tamarack Mine pose to tribal communities and the Mille Lacs Band's approach to holding Talon Metals accountable to protect their cultural resources, people, land, wild rice, and water: Panelists: • Melanie Benjamin, Chief Executive / Chairwoman, Mille Lacs Band of Ojibwe • Kelly Applegate, Commissioner of Natural Resources, Mille Lacs Band of Ojibwe • Esteban Chiriboga, Environmental Scientist, Great Lakes Indian Fish & Wildlife Commission	Owatonna 2

3:00 p.m 4:30 p.m.	Registration in Indian Country: Concrete Actions Tribes Can Take to Provide Voter Registration Opportunities to Their Members Prior to the 2024 Election With the 2024 election rapidly approaching now is the time to take action to make sure our communities are prepared to make an impact. Learn about the most common barriers to voter registration and how to overcome them, such as how lack of residential addressing and mail delivery can impact registration, how to request an on reservation polling place and registration services, and what to do if requests for additional access are denied. Learn about how voter registration can be offered at IHS facilities through National Voter Registration Act designation. Finally, learn about the importance of the Native American Voting Rights Act and what can be done to push this important legislation forward. Highlights of the discussion will include: • Current and future funding opportunities • Training sessions for TCUs and Non-Tribal Institutions • Opportunities for students and recent graduates	Anoka 1
3:00 p.m 4:30 p.m.	*HUD Tribal Consultation on Build America Buy America	Anoka 2

	You are invited to join HUD's Office of Native American Programs for a consultation session on Build America Buy America (BABA) which was enacted as part of the Infrastructure Investment and Jobs Act. BABA established a domestic content procurement preference for all Federal financial assistance obligated for infrastructure projects. BABA requires that all iron, steel, manufactured products, and construction materials used in covered infrastructure projects are produced in the United States. HUD Tribal grantees are exempt from these requirements until May 2024 while HUD consults with Tribes to better understand the impact that BABA requirements will have on future infrastructure development in Tribal communities and to determine how to implement BABA requirements applicable to Tribal grantees. Questions to consider: • What are the impacts of BABA on construction and infrastructure development? • Where do Tribes and TDHEs currently source their iron, steel, construction materials, and manufactured goods? • Do you have access to viable American suppliers of iron, steel, construction materials, and manufactured goods? Your feedback on BABA is extremely important. During this session we'll provide an overview of BABA, an update on HUD actions, and gather your feedback on the impacts of BABA on future infrastructure projects.
