- After the civil war with Binyamin, Yisrael mourned and did teshuva over the almost complete decimation of Binyamin.
- An oath was made not to allow any female of Yisrael marry any man from Binyamin.
- There were many survivors in Binyamin after the war, but there weren't enough women for all of them to be able to marry and perpetuate future generations of Binyamin.
- Yisrael went to war against the members of Yavesh Gil'ad for not coming when called to battle.
- The order was given not to harm any of the single women of Yavesh Gil'ad and to give them to the remaining members of Binyamin as wives.
- But more women were needed to perpetuate the future generations of Binyamin.
- At the annual festival that was held in Shiloh, the members of Binyamin watched the single women dance in the fields and they selected wives from among those women.
