

Purim Bingo: Who Will You Spot This Year?

By Sari Kopitnikoff | @thatjewishmoment

Look out for these characters below this Purim. Can you score a full row... or board?

The generous soul handing out dollar bills to everyone they see.	The person carrying someone on their shoulders—and you genuinely can't tell which legs are real.	The costume so elaborate it requires a three-minute explanation.	The family dressed in a perfectly coordinated group theme.	The Purim juggler, magician, or balloon artist—there's always one!
The person whose costume has built-in flashing lights or sound effects.	The punny costume wearer who gets a groan or "Haaaaa" every time they explain their costume.	The amateur photographer snapping pictures of absolutely everything.	The kid dressed as Mordechai who refuses to break character.	The one wearing a costume so puffy they can barely fit through a door.
The car blasting Purim music loud enough for the entire neighborhood to hear.	The person who hand-delivers every mishloach manot and stays to chat.		The kid trying to trade up their mishloach manot like it's the stock market.	The one giving out homemade hamantaschen – and hoping you appreciate their unique flavored filling.
The toddler in a costume they clearly did not choose and are not happy about.	The person wearing the controversial political costume.	The crafty genius who DIYed their costume and has been planning this since last Purim (or maybe even the Purim before).	The person who somehow manages to collect 20 bags of candy by noon.	The person whose mishloach manot bag is so beautifully packaged, you hesitate to open it.
The last-minute mishloach manot giver raiding their pantry for random snacks.	The person handing out mishloach manot with a d'var Torah inside.	The one who wears the same Purim accessory every single year and calls it a costume.	The kid who's a bit too excited about their sword prop.	The person in a mysterious, full-coverage costume—and you never actually find out who they are!

Purim Bingo: Who Will You Spot This Year?

By Sari Kopitnikoff | @thatjewishmoment

Fill each square with a character you may encounter on Purim. Then play throughout the day!

				