Dick was manager of several radio & TV stations and V.P. of European Operations for Telmar Communications in London. After jumping out of airplanes 82-times as an avid SKYDIVER he discovered an adrenaline rush can also be found being an ACTOR ... with less chance of getting KILLED.

Subsequently, he has played everything from the mathematical genius in a stage production of "Proof", to a judge who likes wearing women's clothes in the movie comedy "Scamelot". Other films include "Pathfinders", a WWII drama and the title character in "Franklin Wunder" – the story of a man trying to do something "good" for the world on the last day of his life.

He MURDERED a couple of guys in the movie "Flying Solo", and in a role-reversal became a beloved Catholic priest in "Where There Is Darkness" - a film currently winning multiple awards in Europe and the U.S.
