Why I started acting:

I've always been a fantasy world lover. I dreamt and acted out different characters since I was little, but when I grew older things changed.

For a kid it's acceptable to dream, but when they grow up the acceptance and support from society, especially their own family changes. Sometimes judgemental People even stop them from achieving their goals. Only because they don't believe in the dream the kid has.

My dream is to be a full time actor. Not because of fame or money but for the experience. To bring a character to life is one of the most exciting and thrilling things you can do in my opinion.

I've never really had someone to share my fascination with because as I am Swiss, careers that are in the artistic field aren't seen as a 'real' or 'safe' job opportunity.

Over the years of trying to fit in and changing myself, I realised it was high time I stopped listening to all the critics and took my passion to the next level.

In the comfort of my room, I started to practice everyday.

Through these days I received harsh words that encouraged me even more to be sure about my passion. Comments might hurt me but on the positive side I'll learn to be a better actor as it helps me to focus on my journey. Through all these good and bad times I encountered I learned to control facial expressions and emotions, which actually is a plus as in acting, these factors are very much required.

The art of acting hooked me in my deepest desires and I believe that I'm going to make it in the acting world when I believe in myself. The way there is hard and i'm definitely going to struggle many times but it is part of my journey. My journey to my dreams.
