About Her

Shenelle pursued her career in Media at The Unsinkable Albany State University in Albany, GA; receiving her degree in Mass communications & Electronic Media in 2015. While attending college, Shenelle was very active in her media journey as she was a radio personality and program director assistant for her campus radio station, The Real 92.7 and also was a production assistant for Albany State University (ASU)-TV. Shenelle was one of the top ten students in her class to receive a scholarship from the Gilman Scholarship Program to study International Journalism/Media at Xiamen University in China. Soon after, Shenelle received her master's degree in Business Administration from Shorter University in Rome, GA. During her five plus years media career, Shenelle has hosted and worked with major brands such as VH1, Zesus Network, Def Jam, Revolt Summit, The Atlanta Falcons + More. Shenelle is now the founder of Bauce Media Enterprise, LLC and the Creator and Founder of the Flew Here Grew Here Podcast, which highlights the different experiences of culture, music, fashion, and more from your hometown to your new town.
