Sonia Mckie

Sonia Mckie is a dynamic figure, embodying diverse talents and achievements. Born in 1966 in New Jersey, she rose to prominence as the rap artist "Slick E" during the 80s, captivating audiences with her performances alongside renowned artists like Roxanne Shante and Too Live Crew. Transitioning seamlessly, Sonia became a pioneering force in the beauty industry, establishing multiple successful salons in Atlanta and Los Angeles without external financial support, a testament to her entrepreneurial acumen.

Beyond her artistic and business ventures, Sonia's impact extends to literature and media. As an accomplished writer, producer, and director, she founded "Slick E. Entertainment Group," showcasing her versatility in film and television development. Her literary prowess shines through her upcoming third book, "How to win through it all," offering insights gleaned from her varied experiences in life, business, and personal growth.

Sonia's dedication to community empowerment is evident in her founding of "No One To Turn To" (N.O.T.T.T), an organization aiding single parents without traditional government assistance. Her radio show, "The S.E.M. factor," serves as a platform for engaging discussions on life, relationships, and personal development, attracting a broad audience globally.

As a sought-after speaker and influencer, Sonia Mckie's story resonates with audiences seeking inspiration and practical guidance. Her forthcoming autobiography, "After The Pain," promises to unveil the depths of her journey, from adversity to triumph, and inspire readers to embrace resilience and transformation in their own lives.
