

Dear Cinema,

It feels like I'm writing to an old friend, one I've missed dearly. You've been on my mind for as long as I can remember, like a constant, comforting presence in my life. I hope this letter finds you well and brings a smile to your face, just as your stories have brought countless smiles to mine.

I want to share with you something that has been weighing on my heart for quite some time now. You see, ever since I was a kid, I've had this insatiable love for you. From the moment I watched my first movie, I knew I wanted to be a part of your world. I joined the drama club in primary school, and later in high school, I found solace in the magic of the stage. But life had its twists and turns, and I drifted away from you, chasing other dreams and paths that seemed more practical at the time.

Yet, here I am, 27 years old and still dreaming of you. I've tried my hand at different things, but nothing has ever quite captured my heart like you have. You've always been there, whispering to me in the back of my mind, reminding me of the joy and passion I felt when I was immersed in your stories.

I may not have much experience in the world of acting beyond those drama club days, but my love for you has only grown stronger with time. There's something about the way you weave tales of love, adventure, and triumph that ignites a fire within me. I want to be a part of that magic again, to dive headfirst into your world and create moments that will linger in the hearts of others, just as your stories have lingered in mine.

So, here I am, knocking on your door once more, hoping you'll welcome me back with open arms. I may be a little older now, but my passion for you burns as brightly as ever. I'm ready to chase after my dreams with reckless abandon, to pursue the happiness and fulfillment that only you can offer.

So here's to us, my dear Film and the World of Acting, for the adventures we've shared and the ones yet to come. Let's dance under the spotlight and laugh in the face of doubt, for together, we are unstoppable.

With all my love,

Your long lost friend. Stacey.