Feedback for Team 1

(Effie, Huan, Sam):

- o Interesting topic that explores the psychology of the human and how we respond to sensory stimuli. It seems like your research has been thoroughly done so far. I've never heard of the word 'Somatisation' before, so this is new and exciting. It seems like a complex topic, but I believe that there are many ways you can go ahead with it; there can be different aspects about this that can be explored.

- o Coming from different disciplines (painting, textiles, IDE), will you realise this project through a common ground of creative practice, or explore how you can use your separate disciplines within this topic?
- o What type of emotion(s) would you like to evoke with your multi-sensory prompts? Think about ethics; be careful not to cause distress/psychological discomfort.
- o Consider what was mentioned about people with autism, who are sensitive to sensory stimuli; is there a way around this for your project?
- o What type of vessel(s) will you create for your research? What texture(s) will be involved? Will it (for example) be hidden in a box for your participants to explore? Will there be music playing in the background at the same time? How will you raise interest?

The importance of sensory processing in mental health

The Importance of Sensory Processing in Mental Health: A Proposed Addition to the Research Domain Criteria (RDoC) and Suggestions for RDoC 2.0

Front Psychol. 2019; 10: 103. The time is ripe to integrate burgeoning evidence of the important role of sensory and motor functioning in mental health within the National Institute of Mental Health's [NIMH] Research Domain Criteria [RDoC] framework ( National Institute of Mental Health, n.d.a), a multi-dimensional method of characterizing mental functioning in health and disease across all neurobiological levels of analysis ranging from genetic to behavioral.

Feedback for Team 2

Ferris Wheel (Vittoria, Tong, Yige, Desmond)

- o The topic homelessness remains important to highlight, also especially now (global inflation; prices are rising in every aspect of our everyday lives).
- o It's interesting to read the stigmatisation around homeless people; I wonder how students at the Royal College of Art view homeless people too? Would different communities/age groups, etc. have different views about it?
- o What type of art could you create, as a group, to provide comfort around this topic? What's the goal with it? Could be interesting to see if you can fight against the assumptions/stigmatisation around homeless people through art-making.
- o If you intend to create a film, how and where will you showcase it?
- o What other types of research methods could you utilise in the process? It could be interesting to see observational drawings of your own perception(s) when encountering homelessness.

- o The multimedia artist JR uses art as a tool for hope, highlighting 'hidden' often poor communities, through his art; if you haven't already, look at his TedTalk that I watched a few weeks back:

https://www.ted.com/talks/jr\_why\_art\_is\_a\_tool\_for\_hope

- o He also said something important, that could inspire us all: «Art can change things but can it change the world? Or can it change a man? Before you answer that question, think, at some point in your life, have you changed? And if yes, if you did, why can't they?»

JR: Why art is a tool for hope

Famed for enormous black-and-white portraits that are pasted on surfaces ranging from the Louvre to the US-Mexico border wall, multimedia artist JR continues to tackle ambitious projects. In this powerfully moving talk, he shares how he made a giant mural on the courtyard floor of a maximum-security prison – with the help of guards and prisoners alike – and ended up with much more than a compelling image.

Crawley Open House

A great homeless shelter near me - they do lot of outreach with Primary schools in my area. They really love connecting people with reality of being homeless.
