RCG CPAs Advisors Announces Richmond Expansion

Weir Consulting Team Joins Firm, Adding Advisory and Fractional CFO Services

RICHMOND — In a move to broaden services, the Richmond accounting firm RCG CPAs Advisors welcomes Stephen Weir and his team from the former Weir Consulting. They’ve joined RCG to build the firm’s advisory, fractional CFO and forward-looking financial services.

Weir will take on the new role of Principal and Fractional CFO, and will serve as the COO for RCG CPAs Advisors.

“The addition of Stephen and his two associates gives us the opportunity to provide clients with deeper advisory services and a more holistic approach” said CEO Jeff Robinson, a longtime Richmond CPA who founded RCG CPAs Advisors in 2010.

“In addition to offering clients a historical perspective on where they’ve been, we can provide the necessary strategy and guidance to help them move forward,” said Robinson, who served as a partner at the regional firm Goodman & Company for more than 13 years before launching RCG.

Weir is a former analyst with Capital One who served four years as executive director of nonprofit Church Hill Activities and Tutoring, or CHAT, which provides education, enrichment and support services for youth in Richmond’s East End.

“I’m thrilled to be joining the team at RCG,” Weir said. “This brings together the science of looking back financially with the art of looking forward. Jeff and his team have many years of experience and this accelerates our opportunities for growth.”

Robinson and Weir met through their work for a mutual client. “We found that our personalities and ethics aligned,” Robinson said, “along with a common vision in how we could move forward together in serving for-profit and nonprofit organizations and individuals.”
