HORSE FARM TOURS

Some Odds-On Favorite Ways to Visit the Homes of Lexington's Four-Legged Stars

Beautiful horse farms have been part of the Bluegrass since the region was first settled. So have horse farm visitors.

Early 19th-century travelers remarked on the beautiful country estates of the Bluegrass noting, as one put it, “a handsome horse is the highest pride of a Kentuckian.”

When great 20th-century Thoroughbred Man o’ War retired to stud in the Bluegrass, visitors from around the world flocked to see him. Man o’ War’s groom, Will Harbut, kept ledgers for visitors to sign. When Man o’ War died in 1947, there were 63 ledgers containing over 1.3 million names.

Ready to do your part to uphold this great Bluegrass tradition? Visiting a horse farm while you’re in town is a uniquely Bluegrass kind of experience you’ll long remember. And it’s easier than you might think.

There are about 450 horse farms in the region (about 150 in Lexington/Fayette County alone). They’re all working farms — which means you should never just “drop by” — but more than a few allow visitors by appointment or through arrangements with professional tour companies. Here’s how you can revisit racing history, see the world’s most fabulous farms and barns, get up-close-and-personal with Kentucky Derby winners, or discover an exciting variety of horse breeds.

Three Ways to Giddyup and Go

There are three ways to visit a horse farm. You can:

- ◆ Reserve a seat on a regular guided group tour;
- ◆ Hoof-it-yourself by making appointments at specific farms; or,
- ◆ Hire a private guide to conduct a custom tour

A Guided Tour: A Quick and Easy Overview

If your interest is general and your time limited — or if you don’t know which farm you’d like to see — consider taking a regular guided group tour. The itinerary is planned by the tour company to offer an overview of Lexington and its horse farms. Some farms allow visitors only through tour companies.

On the other hand, three hours on and off a bus is probably not the best option for those with restless youngsters. And since horse farms may be just a part of the itinerary, ask in advance what the tour will include to see if it has enough horse stops to satisfy your interest.

Although offered daily most of the year, reservations are still needed for the tours. Make them as far in advance as possible since tours sell out, especially during peak visitor times, including April and October.

◆ Blue Grass Tours (859-252-5744) Two tours daily at 9:00 a.m. and 1:30 p.m. Monday through Sunday, spring through fall, with a minimum of four guests. Tours last about three hours and include a stop at a local horse farm, Keeneland Race Course and other points of interest. Pick-ups available at several hotels. $35; $25 for ages 12 and under. They also offer longer tours like “Horses, Hooch and History” which includes a boxed lunch and a stop at a distillery. You can book online at www.bluegrassstours.com.

◆ Horse Farm Tours, Inc. (859-268-2906 or 800-976-1034) Tours are given daily at 8:15 a.m. and 12:45 p.m. seven days a week year-round. Every tour includes a drive by Calumet, two or three farms to see mares, foals and stallions, plus Keeneland, and lasts about three and a half hours. Tours depart from several area hotels. $36 ($45 during Derby week). Children under 12 are $26.

◆ Thoroughbred Heritage Horse Farm Tours. (859-260-8687) Tours are offered daily at 8:30 a.m. and 12:30 p.m. year-round and depart primarily from the Embassy Suites. This three hour tour includes a drive by Calumet, a tour of Keeneland race track, an up close personal encounter with Thoroughbreds, and points of interest from the movies Seabiscuit, Dreamer, and Secretariat. $36 ($40 in winter). Children 12 and under are $26.

◆ Unique Horse Farm Tours. (859-213-6653) Departing from several hotels near the Kentucky Horse Park, usually at 8:30 a.m. and at noon, this tour gives you the behind-the-scenes stories about the people and horses that make Lexington “Horse Capital of the World.” Tour historic estates and new multi-million dollar farms on this two to three hour van tour. Adults are $40. Children 12 years old and under are $20.

Booking Your Own Visits

If you're the independent type, hoofing it on your own is a perfectly acceptable and enjoyable option. A number of farms— from Thoroughbred showplaces to smaller farms specializing in a range of other horse breeds— welcome individual tourists. Policies vary from farm to farm, but usually there's no great trick to getting in. Just follow the first commandment of horse farm sightseeing:

Thou shalt make advance arrangements.

While it can be said with absolute surety that no farm in the Bluegrass welcomes unexpected guests, other visitor policies will vary from time to time and from season to season. Some allow visitors only on specific days or limit tours at certain times of year such as breeding season (February through mid-July), Kentucky Derby time, during horse sales, or during race meets. Most likely, you'll need to check in at the farm office first.

Some horses may not be on view to visitors, so if you're hoping to see a particular horse, inquire about its status ahead

Bluegrass Note: An expansive listing of farms, along with histories of some leading farms, can be found in the book Horse Farms and Horse Tales of the Bluegrass by Wilma Beale, available at local bookstores and on amazon.com.

Don't feel intimidated if your knowledge or interest isn't that specialized. Most visitors aren't quite that savvy; they just want to see the world's most beautiful horses and horse farms. Need we say that you've come to the right place?

Thoroughbred Farms

Most Kentucky Derby winners are “retired” to Bluegrass farms to begin their second career in the breeding shed. If you want to see just one or several of these living legends, the following farms are excellent choices, and all use www.visithorsecountry.com as their online booking portal.

◆ Coolmore America's Ashford Stud, near Versailles, is home to 2015 Triple Crown Winner American Pharoah, 2000 Derby winner Fusaichi Pegasus, as well as 1995 Derby winner Thunder Gulch and will show their majestic stallions by advance appointment. Giant's Causeway, whose stud fee is $100,000, also resides here. Like a growing number of stallions, many of Ashford Stud's travel to the Southern hemisphere after the Kentucky breeding season ends, so they may not be at home July through January. Tours are offered Monday through Friday at 3 p.m. During Derby Week one additional tour at 11 a.m. will be offered.

◆ WinStar Farm encompasses about 2,700 acres of majestic Bluegrass landscape, with divisions for stallions, broodmares, foals and yearlings as well as a racing stable. A top force in the Thoroughbred industry, WinStar bred the 2010 Kentucky Derby Winner Super Saver, and many other champions. Public tours meet at the state-of-the-art stallion barn and include the breeding shed. Tours are usually given Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays (except holidays and Oaks Day).

◆ Jonabell Farm, home of the Darley stallions in America, is where you will find 2016 Derby winner Nyquist, 2011 Derby Winner Animal Kingdom and 2007 Derby Winner Street Sense. Learn about the global scope of HH Sheikh Mohommad's international breeding and racing operations. The tour begins inside the farm office. You'll then head outside for a stallion viewing, visit the breeding shed, and walk through the modern stallion barns.

◆ Taylor Made Farm. Taylor Made Farm was created in 1976 to provide care for mares shipped to central Kentucky to be bred to stallions standing here. The farm, which began as 120 acres, has expanded its scope and its acreage. Now over 1,600 acres, it is one of the leading sales agencies in the world. In 1999, three Taylor Made graduates won races at the Breeders' Cup—a feat unparalleled in racing history. Northern Fleet is among the top stallions in residence, and 2014 Derby Winner California Chrome makes this farm his home.

While the following farms may not have a living Kentucky Derby winner, they have their own unique history as well as lavish barns and landscaping. Call Normandy farm direct; tours of the others can be purchased at www.visithorsecountry.com.

◆ Three Chimneys Farm, located on Old Frankfort Pike in Woodford County, west of Lexington, has everything you'd expect to see on one of the world's finest horse farms, and some of the super stars of the Thoroughbred world! Three Chimneys offers tours of their Stallion Division in April and October, Tuesday through Saturday. April tours begin promptly at 1 p.m., while October tours begin at 10 a.m.

◆ Claiborne Farm, north of Lexington near Paris, has a strong and unbroken influence on the Thoroughbred industry. Owned by the Hancock family, Claiborne has been a leading Thoroughbred farm for generations. The guided walking tour includes the simple tombstone that marks the grave of the great Secretariat, 1973 Triple Crown winner (and considered by many to be the greatest race horse of all time). Tours are offered seven days a week at 10 a.m. Make your reservation through www.visithorsecountry.com.

◆ Lane's End Farm. This beautiful farm has been compared to a national park. During the off season, tours are offered on Thursdays at 10 a.m. No tours are available during the breeding season, which runs from February to the end of June, or while the Keeneland and Fasig-Tipton sales are taking place.

◆ Normandy Farm on Paris Pike is famous for its unusual L-shaped barn commissioned in 1933 by then-owner Joseph Widener. It is said to be an exact replica of a barn in Normandy, France, where he sought refuge after his plane crashed during World War I. The barn features a clock tower and its roof, gables, cupolas and dormers are adorned with ceramic cats and other animals. The farm also includes an interesting cemetery, in which a life-size bronze statue of Thoroughbred champion Fair Play overlooks the graves of Fair Play and Mahubah, sire and dam of Man o' War. Free tours by appointment only; April through October, Monday through Friday. Call this farm directly at (859) 294-9595.

Horse Country, Inc.

Over thirty prestigious Thoroughbred farms and equine facilities, including the famed Hagyard Equine Medical Institute and Rood and Riddle Equine Hospital, have banded together to offer a variety of opportunities for visitors to the Bluegrass Region. If you have your own transportation, you can go online and choose a tour from their ever expanding offerings. Tickets for adults are $20 per person. Tours last about one hour. Gratuity is always included when you book and purchase a tour at www.visithorsecountry.com. Sign up for their e-newsletters and you'll be the first to know about special opportunities to connect with our most famous celebrity horses.

Bluegrass Note: Here are some horse farm visit basics, no matter how or when you visit.

- ◆ You can take pictures.
- ◆ You can take your children, but you should, for their own safety, keep a close rein on them. (And only you can decide if they are ready to hear an often-detailed description of how horses breed; those adult tourists ask the darnedest questions!)
- ◆ Wear comfortable clothes and sturdy shoes.
- ◆ No feeding or petting the horses. Horse personalities, like human temperaments, vary widely. They may bite or kick.
- ◆ The farms just look like parks; no picnics.
- ◆ You won't be able to sit on or ride the horses.

Customized Tours

If you like to travel at your own pace, have specific farms, horses and attractions you want to see— or want the added allure of “insider” knowledge and access— you can hire a private guide for a custom tour.

This is the luxurious way to go. Most private tour companies have access to a wide variety of farms (some not open to groups or do-it-yourself tours). You can make pit stops or photo stops as often as you like. And your guide should entertain you with all kinds of fascinating facts, legends and lore.

As you might expect, private, custom tours cost more than guided group tours but may turn out to be a comparably priced alternative if you have more than a few people in your family or group.

In most cases, custom tours are offered as a “step-on service” — the guide joins you in your vehicle. Some companies will provide transportation, especially for groups.

What you'll pay for a custom tour can vary widely depending upon the tour company, the length and content of the tour, the number in your party, and whether you use their transportation or yours. Minimum prices recently quoted ranged from $100 to $150 for a two or three hour tour for a few people.

Here are companies that offer private, custom tours. All are friendly and knowledgeable. A good way to choose one is to call in advance of your visit to discuss possible itineraries and rates and to get a sense of which guide's personality and tour style might best complement your own.

Bluegrass Note: When visiting a horse farm, it's customary to tip the groom or farm representative who shows you around, usually $5 to $10 depending upon the time spent with you. If taking a guided or private tour, ask if the fee includes tips.

Champions in Retirement

What happens to our Thoroughbred stars when they begin to fade on the race track or in the breeding shed? "Old Friends" is a nonprofit organization dedicated to providing a dignified and comfortable retirement home for racing's elite. Based at Dream Chase Farm near the Kentucky Horse Park, "Old Friends" offers an up-close encounter with great champions. Meet 1997 Derby Winner Silver Charm and 2002 Kentucky Derby and Preakness winner War Emblem. Celebrity horse Popcorn Deelites, who was cast in the movie Seabiscuit, also resides at Old Friends. Tours are offered seven days a week year round. Tours are at 10 a.m., 1 p.m. and 3 p.m. mid-March through October. Tours in the winter are at 11 a.m. only (November 1 through mid-March). Adults $10; kids 12 and under are free. Call ahead for an appointment. (502-863-1775)

While Old Friends focuses primarily on stallions, Our Mims Retirement Haven, just north of Lexington in Paris, Kentucky, takes care of retired Thoroughbred broodmares. Calumet's champion three year old filly Our Mims resided on this farm in her later years, and her grandson 1997 Breeders' Cup Sprint winner Elmhurst, lives here now. Meet Elmhurst and many great ladies of the industry. Watch the whole herd interacting in the Haven's pastures. Visitors are encouraged, by appointment. Call (859) 227-6304.

Horses of All Types

You may think that a horse farm is a horse farm is a horse farm, but it just isn't so. Most farms specialize in a specific breed of horse. Most Bluegrass farms are Thoroughbred operations, breeding and training horses primarily for racing.

Bluegrass Note: Looking for the ultimate Bluegrass souvenir? Contact the Thoroughbred Owners and Breeders Association (859-276-2291) for a free booklet called "Buying Your First Racehorse."

Kentucky produces more Thoroughbreds than any other state. But you can also see many other kinds of horses in the "Horse Capital of the World."

◆ American Saddlebreds, used for show and pleasure riding, are Kentucky's only native breed of horse. Saddlebred farms that allow visitors by appointment include

Wingswept Farm, 1529 Keene-Troy Road near Nicholasville (859-219-9857) and Blue Willow Farm, 4400 Delaney Ferry Road in Versailles (859-873-2339).

◆ For a friendly visit with Morgan horses, America's first breed of horse, visit Bonnie and Fred Neville's Burr Oak Farm in Scott County. The Morgan horse sprang from a single stallion raised in Vermont in the late 1700s (502-863-0887). Angel's Acres, also in Scott County, has Morgans, too (502-863-0399).

◆ The Kentucky Horse Park. It's not just a State Park, it's a working horse farm, too -- and much more! The 1,200 acres that comprise the Kentucky Horse Park have served as an active horse farm since the 18th century. Featuring up to 50 breeds of horses at work and play, including 2003 Derby winner Funny Cide and 1994 Derby winner Go for Gin. The Park offers a variety of equine presentations to educate and entertain, along with horseback riding, horse drawn tours and carriage rides.

The grounds are home to the National Horse Center. Many of the top equine management associations and breed organizations have their national or state offices located here. Filling six office buildings in the Park, the Center is home to The United States Equestrian Federation, The Pyramid Society, the American Hackney Horse Association, the American Hanoverian Society, U.S. Pony Clubs, Inc., and many more.

The Park is open seven days a week from around March 15 to October 31, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. During the winter the Park is closed on Mondays and Tuesdays. (800-678-8813 or 859-233-4303)
