THE LEGEND OF THE PIRATES OF THE HIGH SEAS

In the days when pirates ruled the high seas, many were known to ply the waters near Panama City Beach. Though some say they left naught but footprints in the white sandy beaches to tell of their passing, another legend lives on.

According to the ancient tale, the famous pirate Dominique Youx and his krew were beloved in Panama City Beach for sharing their plunder. But when invading pirates tried to steal that treasure, it sparked a battle we relive every year over Columbus Day weekend!

Join Dominique Youx and his krew Friday in Pier Park, where treasure-laden nets will release sparkling jewels into the waiting arms of those below, who are charged with safeguarding them from invading pirates. Once the invading pirates are driven off, a celebration will ensue Saturday with a parade and fireworks.

However, the danger – and fun – won't be finished so quickly. Word has it that on Sunday more pirates will converge on Panama City Beach's legendary harbor, the Grand Lagoon! We'll need everyone to help by joining the fun and helping to drive off this second wave of invaders...and then enjoy plenty of pirate fun, like free fishing, music, magic and fireworks!
