

Proposal: Mad 1

A short film project proposed by Alex Hill

10 minute approx. runtime - distributed online.

Themes cover: Teenage drama, house parties, coming of age, teenage relationships.

This film is set at a teenage house party, and has four characters. The protagonist, Joe, is seeking to begin a relationship with his highschool crush Diana, who is hosting the party. Joe is bad with women, but innocently likable. He's a slightly goofy character, especially when compared to Diana who is a shrewd character, who while slightly indifferent to Joe, does have a favourable opinion of him.

He employs his best friend, the eccentric loose cannon Frank to cause an ambitious distraction to get a chance to speak to her alone, avoiding Diana's hooligan ex-boyfriend Mason, a reckless blockhead who is still interested in Diana and very protective.

This will be a fun film, with funny moments, awkward dialogue and a good set of characters to bounce off another. It will contain many aspects of your typical house party, with alcohol, banter, romance and petty violence.

To use four young actors for the roles, who will be auditioned and carefully selected.

On top of this, the director plans to publicize this project during pre-production to local film groups to see if in Bristol, a city full of young creatives, there are other people who would like to help out in any way. Especially interested in finding a DOP, lighting specialist and production managers, but anyone of any medium is free to help out if interested. Already brought in some volunteers.
