

WINDOW PAIN
Written by Rachael Colley

EMAIL: RACHAEL.COLLEY00@GMAIL.COM

1. EXT. STREET. AFTERNOON

It's a grey, wet and gloomy day and there's very few people walking about. On a corner of the street, a man, for the sake of things let's call him BRIAN (late 30's to early 40's), is walking slightly hunched to protect himself from the rain. He looks both left and right before crossing the street and just as he is 3/4 of the way, he suddenly slams into something he cannot see.

BRIAN
SON OF A BI-

LAUREN walks onto screen, she is around the same age as Brian.

LAUREN
Birds. Bees. Flies and countless other animals can't see windows and therefore can't understand what is blocking them. They simply fly minding their own business and SLAM.

Just then, Brian, who can't understand what he's just walked into, attempts to walk forward again. He ends up doing the exact same thing.

BRIAN
MOTHER FUC-

LAUREN
For insects to thrive, we need to change. Join me on the fight to a windowless society.

Brian, now worried, starts frantically banging against these invisible walls while Lauren smiles brightly to camera.

The call to action www.windowlessociety.com/join appears on screen.

FADE TO BLACK.