Betty takes Grace over to PETER.

BETTY

Peter this is Grace the new one I was telling you about.

PETER

A pleasure to meet you, Grace.

GRACE

Likewise.

BETTY

I thought you could have Grace's first dance, and show how Canadians do it.

PETER

Of course, Grace?

He holds out his hand, Grace takes it and he leads her onto the dance floor.

PETER

How's your dancing? Because I don't think I give Canada a good reputation.

GRACE

I'm a bit out of practice. So we can be mediocre together.

Peter laughs.

PETER

Sounds like a plan.

They do dance in a mediocre way. Laughing at each other's missteps.

Grace spots Ruth dancing with another soldier, Betty and Lily dancing together spinning each other.

Once the song is over Peter leads Grace out of the dance floor.

PETER

Would you like a drink?

GRACE

If you don't mind?

PETER

Of course not, one dance equals one drink. Betty's rules, right?

Peter smiles at her cheekily.

PETER [CONT.]

I figured it out on my third night dancing with Betty. It's a good plan. But it means I can order whatever drink. Did you know Betty hates gin?
