

EDWIN BURDIS

Edwin Burdis is an established artist and filmmaker. His work has been presented internationally at some of the world's most prestigious institutes and galleries, including the Hayward Gallery and TATE Modern in London.

He uses his multi-faceted practice as a vehicle to fuse his activities in the visual arts, performance and music. He has collaborated with many acclaimed musicians, singers, dancers, writers and artists. Edwin has contributed significantly to the British art and music scenes for over two decades and continues to push artistic boundaries between these contemporary fields.

His long-standing career in the arts and music led him to produce and direct video, artworks and music films for emerging and established bands such as Arctic Monkeys, Hot Chip, The Coral and Blossoms. He was a founder member of the cult band Man Like Me and the first artist-in-residence for Domino Records.

"The rules are made to be broken, but if you don't know them then something goes missing."

Nicolas Roeg
